CTC Vows Fast Answer on E&N

The Canadian Transport Commission was bombarded with briefs today as it opened hearings into the future of the the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway's Victoria-Courtenay passenger service.

A spokesman for the commission said members may make and announce their decision before returning to Ottawa.

More than 100 people were present when the three-member CTC review commission opened proceedings in the Red Lion Inn.

There were no less than 24 briefs on hand when the inquiry opened and organizers say they expect more.

Chairman of the committee is E.J. Benson and commissioners are Jim McDonough and Anne Carver.

The city of Victoria's submission scoffed at CP Rail's claim the passenger line will never be profitable and chided the CTC for unilaterally accepting two-year-old data from the company.

About a year ago the CTC granted a CP Rail request to end passenger service on the line by July but provincial government intervention led to a postponement of the closure until Dec. 13.

The review committee of the CTC holding the public inquiry has the power to overrule the original CTC decision.

The hearing was called because of new information that has come to light since the original decision.

The city brief argues the facts put to the original hearing were insufficient for the committee to make the decision it did in December, 1977.

Based on information provided by CP Rail, the committee concluded the passenger service is uneconomic and likely to remain uneconomic.

"The actual losses incurred by this passenger train service are substantial considering the small number of passengers for whose convenience it currently exists."

But numerous groups pointed to a significant resurgence — 800 per cent according to the Save the E and N steering committee — in passenger traffic on the line with a little bit of local initiative and publicity.

The city brief, along with others from the Capital Regional District, NDP MP Tommy Douglas and letters from Liberal MP Hugh Anderson, points out the failure of CP Rail — parent company of the E and N — to live up to its obligation to try and better the profitability of the

137 Carats And $12M

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The world's finest and — at $12 million — most expensive diamond, the 137.02-carat Premier Rose, was displayed here Tuesday.

The Mouw Diamond Cutting Works, in partnership with a U.S. diamond firm, paid a record $5.17 million last May for the stone in the rough.

There are several potential buyers, said Sylvain Mouw in an interview at his family's tightly-guarded offices in the diamond district of Johannesburg. For security reasons, he wouldn't say who was bidding.

"We have been in touch with interested parties in America, the Far East and the Middle East," he said. "This is a stone worthy of royalty and this is not an empty statement."

The diamond was found at the Premier mine near Pretoria last April and the Mouw family, in partnership with William Goldberg, of Goldberg-Weiss of New York City, made the winning bid when De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd. put the stone up for sale in May.

Sylvain's father, Joe, showed off the diamond in its protective, spotlighted case in which it slowly revolved, blazing light from its 189 facets. Everybody was smiling except the man in plain clothes with a pistol in his belt.

The stone will go to New York for examination by the Gemological Institute of America where Mouw predicted it will get the highest rating, D-Flawless, meaning it is a pure white diamond.

The world's largest diamond, the Cullinan Diamond — 3,106 carats — was found in 1905, also at the Premier mine. The Star of Africa No. 1, which is in the British Royal Sceptre, was cut from it.

Sylvain said the Premier Rose is much finer than the Cullinan due to techniques unavailable when the Cullinan was cut in 1908.

The planning, cutting, faceting and polishing of the Premier Rose took six months. The Mouws made more than 60 plastic replicas of the rough stone, cutting them in practice runs.

It's a Crisis, Says Sadat

CAIRO (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said today the peace talks between Egypt and Israel are in a state of crisis and raised the possibility of a suspension to allow the two countries time to ponder their positions.

At the same time, informed Egyptian sources said their government has new proposals designed to avoid a total deadlock while still holding to Egypt's key demands.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli cabinet broke off a review of the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations in Washington to await clarification of the proposals expected from Egypt.

"According to the latest reports received, Egypt is about to submit new proposals and demands related to the negotiations between the two countries. These reports are not yet official and complete.

"In view of this fact, the cabinet decided to hold the political debate after it has received all the necessary clarifications concerning the additional positions of Egypt."

Egyptian sources said the proposals will be explained to U.S. President Carter by Egyptian Vice-President Hosni Mubarak, who is on his way to Washington.

The sources said they seek to deal with the Gaza Strip after a peace treaty with Israel is signed, leaving the problem of the West Bank to a subsequent stage.

The sticking point at the Washington talks has been Sadat's demand that the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty be linked with progress on solving the West Bank and Gaza Strip questions.

INDUSTRIAL PARK ISSUE

The industrial park referendum is the big issue in Saturday's municipal election in Saanich and voters will have a fairly clear-cut choice between the pro and con candidates.

IRA Opens Terror Campaign

Times News Services

BELFAST — Irish Republican Army guerrillas hit Northern Ireland today in their heaviest bombing campaign of the past year causing millions of pounds worth of damage and warning there will be no Christmas ceasefire.

The attacks, in which 37 people were wounded, were a reminder of the worst days of the Northern Ireland troubles and a bitter blow to the security forces and government, which had been promoting the view that life in Ulster gradually was returning to normal.

The bombings were viewed as an attempt by the IRA to sabotage a recent relaxation of security measures and a current visit by Northern Ireland Secretary Roy Mason to the United States.

Mason is trying to encourage more investment and

Airlines Seeking 5% Fare Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — Three airlines have filed proposed increased rates for flights within Canada starting Jan. 1.

Air Canada, CP Air and Nordair all asked the Canadian Transport Commission for increases averaging five per cent with variations "reflecting local conditions."

Quebecair also is expected to file for an increase, commission officials said today.

The increases are subject to approval by the CTC.

"Like everyone else, we face cost increases in all areas, especially for wages, fuel, airport and landing fees," said G. E. Manning, CP Air marketing vice-president, in a news release.

"In 1979 airport user fees are expected to be approximately 26 per cent higher than in 1978 and fuel costs are anticipated to increase more than eight per cent."

CP Air also said there will be some lower fares, with Canadian charter class advance booking rates being reduced for mid-week travel during off-peak periods.

The company said a new 35-per-cent discount excursion fare is proposed for the British Columbia-Yukon-Alberta routes.

Manning said, in explaining revisions to Canadian charter class fares to provide for seasonal levels, that there is a need to even out traffic patterns and lower rates are planned when passenger loads traditionally are light.

The proposed regular economy class fare between Toronto and Vancouver, for example, would be $211, compared with the present $201.

BEER PLOY PROBED

The Liquor Control and Licensing Branch is investigating a report that a Vancouver hotel has attempted to get rid of a surplus amount of U.S. beer by mixing it with Canadian draught beer, a branch spokesman said today.

The spokesman only confirmed that the investigation is under way and gave no further details.

Union spokesman Ron Bonar said in an interview from Vancouver he is aware unofficially of a former bar manager's charge that the hotel had been mixing the beer.

Bonar, business manager for the Hotel, Restaurant, Culinary and Bartenders' Union, Local 40, said the man claims he was forced to quit his job at the hotel because he refused to mix the U.S. canned beer with the Canadian draught.

He declined to name the hotel and stressed the reports he has received have only been unofficial. He said there have not been any other reports.

B.C. hotels were stuck with a surplus of American beer once the three-month brewery strike this summer was settled and B.C. breweries began to produce.

PM Plans Cabinet Shuffle Then Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says he plans to shuffle his cabinet before the Christmas season is over and then lead the Liberals in a federal election when Canadians have more confidence in their future.

He refused to pinpoint a date for the election, saying it will be held in a matter of months, rather than days.

Trudeau's five-year mandate expires next summer and he is expected to hold a federal election, his fourth as leader, in spring.

The prime minister was slightly more precise on the timing of the cabinet shuffle. It would be either before or during the Christmas season. Trudeau aides said the shuffle had been planned for October and then early this month but was postponed.

Some polls show the Liberals could fare better if a new leader was found. Would Trudeau step down to help the party?

"No. When I was leading the party (in public opinion polls), I didn't think of ditching the party. I have no such plans now."

Why was Trudeau so confident he should continue as leader?

"Considering the alternatives, I think I'm the best man," he said with a restrained chuckle.

Budget Keyword: Caution

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said the government will have to exercise caution to avoid overspending when it brings in a new budget Thursday.

But he added it was the rate of growth of deficits and not the size of them alone that was of greater concern to the government.

Trudeau, who ducked several questions on the economy Tuesday at one of his sporadic weekly news conferences, also seemed to suffer a momentary lapse of memory, saying the budget was coming Wednesday.

Trudeau said the federal cash requirements this year will be about $9 billion, about $11 billion next year and "probably a bit higher than the year after."

Chretien has said the cash deficit this year will be a record $11.8 billion, falling to $9.7 billion in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

The prime minister, reply-

Chinese Sock That Sinful Rock

By JOHN FRASER
Special to The Times

PEKING — A new national youth newspaper has published a stinging, sarcastic attack on the sins of Western rock music, indirectly acknowledging that it is catching on with young Chinese couples.

The article, however, was written in such a colorful and suggestive way, it may just encourage more young people to discover what all the fuss is about.

Ostensibly, the reason for the blast is the growing number of rock and roll nightclubs in the "revisionist" Soviet Union, but there is ample evidence the real target is closer to home.

A couple of weeks ago, the government-run International Club revived its weekly Saturday night dance for foreigners and it has provoked intense curiosity among a surprising number of Chinese in the capital. More importantly, dancing at private Chinese parties has been officially, if informally, approved for several months.

Although it is difficult to find out precisely what kind of music the authorities consider appropriate for the Chinese people to dance to, it is now quite clear that Western rock or its Soviet equivalent is not included.

"In a report about the state of rock and roll in various parts of the Soviet Union which was carried in the Communist Youth League newspaper," said the article in Quingnian Bao, the new Chinese equivalent of the same paper, "it is clear how popular this thing (rock and roll) that has prevailed in the West has become among Soviet youth today.

"Today in the U.S.S.R., cafes and nightclubs are glittering and attract all sorts of youths. They are looking for hedonism and stimulation for their organs. Revolutionary idealism, hard work, noble character and living a hard life are all values that have gone out of style and aren't worth a thing."

Alaska Pipe Costs Jumping

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Cost of building the giant Alaska Highway gas pipeline is likely to reach $12 billion, an increase of $2 billion over the previous estimate, says John McMillian, chairman of Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., main U.S. participant in the project.

He and Bob Blair, president of Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd., the Canadian partner, joined in a press luncheon Tuesday to try to dispel rumors that the project is in trouble.

"Stories of our demise have been greatly exaggerated," McMillian said. Blair added that the project to move Alaskan gas south through Canada to U.S. markets "is in excellent standing in Canada."

Of the new cost estimate, McMillian said he believes the pipeline can be financed privately given favorable regulatory agency rulings on rates of return for investors.

There have been rumors in U.S. financial and industry circles that building the 4,800-mile pipeline system — one of the biggest civil engineering projects in history — might still require direct federal aid. But enabling legislation for the project specifically excludes federal financing and a big battle is predicted if the U.S. partner goes back to Congress for money.

Blair said there has "been no thought the (Canadian) government should or would participate in financing" for the Canadian construction. He said there are suggestions the Albeta government might invest some of its oil money in the pipeline but no government support or guarantees have been sought.

Blair also commented that current surplus Alberta gas "should not at all be perceived as competitive or as an alternative" to the Alaskan gas. But he added the Alberta gas could be moved quickly to U.S. markets as a short-term measure if there is urgent need for it.

The project backers called on U.S. federal regulators to relax limits on profits to potential investors.

To date, American and Canadian entrepreneurs and oilmen pressing construction of the pipeline have attracted only small amounts of money from the gas pipeline companies that would buy the gas, and none at all from the major oil companies who would sell the gas, or from major institutional investors who finance massive industrial projects.

What is required, McMillian said, is for the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to relax restrictions on pipeline investors' profits if there are major cost overruns. He also said Congress will have to pass a measure, defeated earlier this year, to allow Alaska to sell $1 billion worth of Industrial Revenues bonds for the financing of the state's leg of the project.

Sleeper Awarded $14,000

LONDON (Reuter) — A British labor tribunal Tuesday awarded the equivalent of $14,000 in damages to an autoworker who was fired for sleeping on the job.

The tribunal found he had not been rehired after it had ruled he had wrongly dismissed and should have his job back.

Muhammed Ayub, 53, was fired in February by Vauxhall Motors Ltd., a General Motors subsidiary, for falling asleep after completing his night work production quotas.

The tribunal ruled that Ayub, who had worked at Vauxhall for nearly eight years, was unfairly dismissed, although he was 50 per cent at fault, and it told the company to take him back.

Vauxhall had refused, saying "it could harm our credibility with unions."

NAVAL OPS FACING CUTS

Canadian naval operations on both coasts will be cut between 10 and 15 per cent in 1979 due to a reduction in the federal defence budget, Vice-Admiral Andrew Collier, commander of maritime command, said Tuesday.

Speaking in Halifax, Collier said the cuts will be made in operations so the naval modernization program won't be jeopardized.

Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime forces Pacific, said today he believes the cut will be closer to 10 per cent than 15.

"The prime reason for having the cuts on the operations side is to ensure that the acquisition program will be relatively undisturbed," Martin said.

He said there will be no reduction in the activities of the training squadron, which he said are vital.

business to Northern Ireland to ease unemployment.

British army experts defused a number of bombs and men of the Royal Ulster Constabulary discovered nine bombs in a van heading toward Belfast.

In the village of Castlederg, 104 kilometres west of Belfast, four bomb blasts caused more destruction similar to that suffered Tuesday in Londonderry, Omagh, Dungannon, Enniskillen and Cookstown.

Newry, which suffered widespread destruction in bomb blasts Tuesday, was sealed off today as two bombs continued to threaten the heart of the market town 72 kilometres south of Belfast.

Among the worst-hit areas Tuesday was the small border town of Castlederg, where witnesses said four bombs blasted the town centre and shattered shops and burned vehicles.

Police there received warnings and evacuated shoppers from busy streets shortly after dusk.

Judge Decision Friday?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hearing into dishonorable personal conduct charges against a provincial court judge adjourned Tuesday as the British Columbia Judicial Council began deliberating whether Judge Erik Bendrodt should be allowed to remain on the bench.

During the hearing, Bendrodt, 44, admitted that he had picked up a 19-year-old prostitute outside a downtown hotel for the purpose of having sex. His lawyer also admitted that Bendrodt is an alcoholic but said the problem has not hampered the judge's performance.

Council chairman Judge Lawrence Goulet of the B.C. provincial court adjourned the hearing until Friday at which time the council's recommendations to Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving could be announced.

During Bendrodt's hearing, Dr. Richard Anderson testified the judge could die in several months if he continues to drink.

Council lawyer Cec Branson said Tuesday that judges are obliged to adhere to an exemplary code of personal conduct, following the Code of Judicial Conduct which is endorsed by judges.

"The question here is has public confidence in him (Bendrodt) been destroyed to the point where it would materially lessen his ability to sit as a judge . . . and whether his court's ability to function has been radically impaired," he said.

Defence lawyer John Rowan said Bendrodt's affair with the prostitute was a single isolated incident and would not be repeated.

Outside the hearing, he said Bendrodt has stopped drinking.

PO Going Metric

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office will go metric July 1 next year, it was announced Tuesday. One benefit will be slightly heavier first-class letters at the minimum rate.

The basic weight—now one ounce, or 28.3 grams—will increase to 30 grams.

The switch also will bring the post office into line with most others in the world that already operate in the metric system.

Hash Oil Worth $4M Seized

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP have seized 455 pounds of hashish oil with an estimated street value of more than $4 million in what may have been the largest such seizure in Canadian history, an RCMP spokesman said Tuesday.

The drugs were found in two trunks on Sunday on a farm north of Shelburne, Ont., 80 kilometres northwest of Toronto, Supt. Don Heaton of the RCMP's Toronto detachment said.

The trunks were first spotted by a Canadian customs officer at Toronto International Airport during a stopover of a flight from Jamaica en route to Mirabel Airport near Montreal.

There a man and a woman picked them up and took them by truck to the farm, followed by officers from the RCMP detachment at St. Jerome, Que.

Youths Attack Drinking

KELOWNA (CP) — Students in the central Okanagan school district have formed the first Counter-Attack Youth Committee in British Columbia to dispatch information on drinking and driving.

More than 50 students representing all secondary schools in the district are on the committee and are working on various projects to prevent teen-agers from driving after drinking.

Three Days In Hell. . .

JOPLIN, Mo. (UPI) — Alfred Summers, resting in a warm hospital, reflected today on the three days he spent buried under tons of concrete and twisted steel.

In the meantime, searchers returned today to the rubble that once was the Connor Hotel in the vain hope that two other missing workers are still alive.

Summers and the two others had been preparing the 70-year-old, nine-story hotel for demolition when it collapsed on top of them Saturday.

Even before the dust had settled other workers began scrambling across the huge chunks of concrete, furiously trying to dig out those who were buried.

The digging turned into a three day, around-the-clock effort.

On Tuesday that digging paid off when a concrete block was lifted and an injured, haggered and dusty Alfred Summers yelled up that he was alive.

Four hours after he was found, workers finally were able to move enough debris to safely pull him out of the 30-foot high air pocket he was trapped in when the building came down.

Summers was rushed to a local hospital where he was listed today in satisfactory condition with three broken ribs and a fractured pelvis.

He told rescuers he didn't realize the entire building had collapsed.

The rescue brought wild, tearful cheers from some 300 persons who gathered in the cold and rain to watch him be pulled from the hole.

Searchers today worked in a cold rain in hopes of finding the other two who were buried.

A specially-trained German shepherd brought in to help in the search, Senator Fritz, worked through the the night and owner Ray Garner said he "showed a lot of indications that back up what the rescued man said about where the other two guys were."

"There's always the chance of finding them," Garner said. "I've been in some hairy situations where you find people days later.

Workmen pour water down hose to Al Summers as three-day rescue dig nears conclusion in Joplin.

Strike Call Follows Cable Car Accident

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A cable car ascending steep Nob Hill lurched to a sudden halt Tuesday, sending passengers flying into the street and injuring 13. Operators of the popular tourist attraction immediately called a strike.

The cable car's gripman, Obed Holland, 41, gashed his head as he was pitched through the car's front window by the abrupt stop.

Three Billion Years Left for Earth to Live

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — New data indicates Earth won't become a "dead" planet for 3 billion more years, unless man destroys it first, a leading scientist says.

N. Mafi Toksoz, a geophysics professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told a science writers' meeting here this week his prediction on Earth's life span is based on discoveries about the evolution and history of planets made through space exploration in the last decade.

Toksoz told the 16th annual briefing of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing that the most up-to-date data shows Earth's crust has changed composition significantly from when it was formed 4.6 billion years ago.

Created from gaseous solar masses, Earth was similar in composition to the moon, Mars, Mercury and Venus. But its evolution as a planet that can sustain life is due to three factors, Toksoz said.

He said Earth's chemical composition, its size and atmospheric temperature have made it able to support life.

Comparing Earth with Venus, Toksoz said both planets are about the same size and both have similar iron cores. But Venus, a hotter planet with more carbon dioxide in its atmosphere, has no water; and any trace of life there has long since burned up and vanished.

A simliar carbon dioxide problem could affect Earth, due to man's heavy combustion of fossil fuels such as coal and oil. But Toksoz said he could not be sure whether that would speed up the rate of Earth's decay.

An Industrial Park makes the grass grow greener on both sides of the fence.

Properly designed, an Industrial Park for non-polluting light industry could please both those who use it and those who look at it. An Industrial Park in the Greater Victoria area will mean safeguarding existing jobs and allow room for expansion of companies already here.

You get the best of both worlds—a place to work and grow and a beneficial tax base for the generations to come.

It's time the people of Victoria had a better garlic.

This city has always needed a garlic spread with nothing to mix. No butter to add. A whole new kind of garlic.

French's introduces just that. French's never-before, one-of-a-kind, easy to use Steakhouse Garlic Spread. The same spread used by some of the country's best restaurants.

Our great garlic flavour is just right for all kinds of dishes.

On a French stick for garlic bread. Brushed on steaks and hamburgers after grilling for extra zest.

Fry mushrooms in it. Stir it into hot vegetables just before serving. Or, melt it as an instant sauce for shellfish. Use it any way you wish. Next time you're expecting guests or want a special treat for your family, try French's new Steakhouse Garlic Spread. In fact, it would be very sociable for everyone in town to try it at the same time.

Changed Circumstances

Neighborhood groups have taken a few knocks lately, after several years on the side of the angels, and they don't like the reversal of roles at all.

In particular, the James Bay Community Association and the Cadboro Bay Residents Association have been in the headlines as underdogs in two separate struggles against big developers at locations across town from each other. They hotly resent being labelled selfish or unduly negative, as both groups were in the controversies over Daon's proposal for 23 townhouses in James Bay and Broadmead's upper class residential project on Minnie Mountain.

They refer the critics to their impressive records. The Cadboro Bay group goes back decades; for example, it fought a proposal during the Second World War to construct an airfield on vacant land — which later became the campus of the University of Victoria. If the airfield went ahead, no doubt it would still be there in the midst of quiet, leafy streets.

The JBCA points to a decade of community advocacy and hard work to preserve a residential neighborhood. JBCA chairman Muriel Mixon told city council last month: "We have worked as diligently as we know how to co-operate with city hall in order to maintain a reasonable quality of life for the residents of James Bay. We are not opposed to development per se — we are simply committed to our well-developed policies for downzoning in predominantly residential areas. . . .if we had not acted in the past James Bay could have been peppered with high rises and indiscriminate development."

The Cadboro Bay opposition to Broadmead's project resented the label of hysterical minority pasted on them here last month, and accurately pointed out that 1,400 people signed a petition — not opposing any and all development, just the plan to increase the density allowed on Minnie Mountain by 60 per cent.

Some observers who attended the public hearing might say that tempers flared out of control, and rather nasty charges were made but accept the CBRA assertion that Saanich council was treated to a relatively orderly debate on the merits of the development, and it is still possible to argue against their position.

Part of the switch in public opinion away from the neighborhood groups seems to be a backlash against the doctrine of neighborhood supremacy, which finds its most fervent apostles in Saanich, some of them on council, unfortunately. It makes a mockery of any kind of representative municipal democracy.

For example, examine the emotion-laden statements made by Saanich voters in the last little while. One has to travel far to match them for parochial narrow-mindedness.

Just in letters to the editor of this newspaper, we have heard that the Victoria Chamber of Commerce has no place in the industrial park debate because it represents Victoria, not Saanich. That Gordon Head residents have no right to vote on the question at all because it doesn't affect them — only those directly involved in the Royal Oak and Interurban neighborhoods should decide.

Quotes from some of these same letters:

□"The people directly affected should be the ones who have the last say in the matter. Once we have a concrete forest, nothing can ever repair the ecological damage inflicted!"

□"This referendum will set a precedent and can easily result not only in an undesirable development taking place in one region today but also in your area tomorrow. Should the electorate at large dictate regarding such developments?"

Obviously, such untenable opinions have met with opposition because circumstances have changed. In James Bay, the community associations would have had little trouble marshalling hundreds of opponents and bending city council's will if Daon had a neighborhood-busting high rise on the drawing boards. But James Bay has been protected, the battle was won some years back. No phalanx of 20-storey apartment blocks threatens the area.

In Cadboro Bay, the Minnie Mountain proposal called for single-family homes and condominium units a scant 45 feet high, in an area which is overdue to take part of the Saanich population increase. Cadboro Bay can't remain a village enclave in an urban metropolis much longer.

Most people, and a majority of aldermen, can't see why the neighborhood groups are so upset.

". . . Cyrus, have you seen Begin and Sadat? . . . not a moment ago I had them in my pocket! . . ."

Just Drop It

If the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association was actively looking for a confrontation with the region's public employees, it could hardly think of a better start than the one it has adopted — an application to the Labor Relations Board accusing the unions of bad faith and trying to compel them to come to the bargaining table.

The GVLRA's basic goal is undoubtedly a good one: begin bargaining earlier than usual in an attempt to have a new contract ready to go, or nearly so, when the current one expires at year-end.

But the tactic chosen to try to reach that goal, the LRB application, must be so harmful to the bargaining process as to far outweigh any good that might otherwise occur through early negotiations.

If the union really is deliberately stalling, its willingness to co-operate is not going to be improved by a battle involving the LRB so early in the process.

And if it just isn't ready to bargain yet because it hasn't completed its preliminary work, its attitude cannot help but worsen after accusations which it feels to be false.

The GVLRA should drop the LRB application immediately, a move that would surely lead to a better atmosphere whenever bargaining does begin.

Canada's Odd Man Out

OTTAWA — News travels from east to west rather than the other way around. Everyone who works for a radio or television network, or for a news service, knows this, and accepts it; everyone who lives in the west knows it as well, and gets thoroughly mad.

Time differences are one reason. The pattern of settlement, which created the original west as an extension of the east, is another. Lastly, Toronto is the top rung that all Canadian media types reach for or deliberately ignore, which is the same thing.

A week ago, the Edmonton Journal published a front page editorial. Titled The Outcast, it was as important a piece of political writing as has appeared in any Canadian newspaper this year. Since it appeared in the west and not, for example, in Montreal's intellectual daily, Le Devoir, almost no one outside of Alberta knows about it, or cares.

Rein in Suspicions

You should care. The Journal said two things. First, it implored Premier Peter Lougheed not to call "a trumped-up election on the constitution," which would, said the newspaper, "pit Albertans against other Canadians, and isolate the province."

Further, it pleaded with Lougheed to remember that there is more to Canada's heritage than the Heritage Fund. "Alberta's suspicion of Ottawa should know some bounds," it said. "If we are to gain, we must be prepared to give."

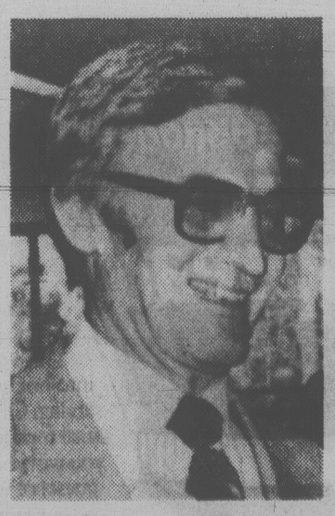
One of the many hidden agendas at the constitutional conference here a fortnight ago was Lougheed's determined try at picking a fight with Prime Minister Trudeau to justify an "Ottawa-bashing" election. As a precaution, Lougheed had reserved media advertising space for a snap election.

Instead, Trudeau turned the other cheek. Lougheed pronounced himself "unsatisfied" with the conference. Back home, Lougheed found his satisfaction in an emotional, 40-minute speech in the legislature in which he said, "I may be an outcast, but we do not intend to back down."

The Journal's influence upon the timing of Lougheed's next election was, no doubt, nil. It affected him enough, though, that he picked up the "outcast" phrase in his legislature speech.

For the first time Lougheed faces credible, non-partisan, intellectual opposition where it matters — back on his home range. For the first time it becomes possible to ask whether What Does Alberta Really Want? and What Does Lougheed Really Want? are one and the same question.

The Journal doesn't speak for Alberta, of course. Nor, perhaps, does Lougheed, even though he would have to denounce the Queen and cap all the oil wells to win his next election by fewer than 70 of the 75 seats.



STAN ROBERTS
. . . Lougheed policy small-c

His constitutional policy, Lougheed said in the legislature, was "a third option" in between separation and the status quo.

A better description of Lougheed's policy, coined by Canada-West Foundation president Stan Roberts, would be a "small-c confederation." Rather than a country composed of 10 provinces, Canada would become 10 provinces assembled into a country. In it, as Lougheed has put it, "the two orders of government, federal and provincial, (would be) equal."

Equals speak only to equals. In pursuit of his policy in which "we all," speak for Canada, and he alone for Alberta, Lougheed alone among the premiers has refused to meet with the Economic Council of Canada. Lougheed again alone, with Quebec again in, has refused to take part in the federal-provincial studies to develop a pan-Canada industrial strategy.

He isn't, in fact, a political outcast. The views of Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan are similar. So might be those of Newfoundland, if it found enough oil and gas.

They Don't Like Him

Personality, mostly, has made Lougheed Confederation's outsider. His aides left Ottawa anguishing which of them would tell Lougheed, as one put it to a federal friend, "everyone detests him." One eastern premier told me, "I scarcely can stand to be in the same room." Even his western colleagues, Saskatchewan's Allan Blakeney and B.C.'s Bill Bennett, talk to Lougheed only when they absolutely must.

"His soul seems as clenched as his jaw," Christina McCall Newman has written. Or as repressed as his withdrawn eyes and tight smile.

There really are two Lougheeds. One is the brilliant manager and organizer, the visionary, the Alberta patriot. The other is the little guy who made it to the top and who still can't quite believe it, wary, humorless, crushed by any criticism.

The quality the two Lougheeds share is undeviating determination. He knew he was right, Lougheed told the legislature: "History will record it was so." Not necessarily. Not, that is, if Albertans decide, unlike Lougheed, that what they really want is to belong to a "large C" Confederation.

Christian Reactions

I have been following the debate over the World Council of Churches grant to the African "freedom" movements with great interest. It would seem that, since the WCC represents itself to be a body of Christian churches, the issue is the manner in which Christianity reacts to the dangerous tragedy being played out in Rhodesia.

I believe guidance may be found in the reaction of Jesus Christ himself while He was here on earth to a similar set of circumstances.

If one equates the Rhodesian government with the might of Rome; the peoples of Rhodesia with the Israeli nation of that time; and the terrorists with the Jewish zealots one may find a good deal of similarity in Jesus' world and the Rhodesia of 1978.

Living in the midst of this inflammable situation, Jesus evinced no interest in the politics of the day. As far as we know he never condemned the forces of Rome or the governor, even when suffering abuse and torture himself at their hands. He never incited the Jews to rise up against the tyranny of Rome, and finally, He never showed any sign of support for the zealots.

There are strong grounds for suspecting that His refusal to "get involved" did contribute to the hatred of the mob which brought Him to the cross. His attitude to the status quo is well illustrated in the answer which he gave when asked whether the Jews should pay tribute to Rome: He called for a coin and asked his interrogators, "Whose image appears on this coin?" When they replied "Caesar's" he told them: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

The lesson is clear: the true Christian approach is one of non-involvement, and rightly so. Who can dare to say which side is right — the one which deprives citizens of their fundamental rights, or the one which murders citizens in cold blood? Can a Christian body really support those who are self-acknowledged murderers of Christian missionaries and their wives and children? Is the WCC grant not in itself racist since such relief as it may purchase is denied the white victims of terror?

Must Christians then sit helplessly on the side lines? Of course not. Christians may pray, knowing by the word of Jesus that prayer in faith is literally able to move mountains, to heal the sick and even to raise the dead. Prayer is potentially the most powerful weapon in the world; one would expect the Christian WCC to know this, and to use it.

Christians who feel that prayer is not enough for them can offer their services in the field to minister to the victims of terror. But this is very dangerous, and one can see that those who find prayer to be too slow, and active help too dangerous, would much rather stay comfortably and safely in Victoria, or Toronto or Geneva or wherever, and send out a parcel of money — this soothes the conscience, shows the world that one's heart is in the right place, is tax deductible, and gives one the right to criticize — or does it? Christians, especially Christian priests, would do well to remember Jesus' parable concerning the mote in our neighbour's eye and the beam in our own eye. — F. M. Damant, 215 Beechwood Avenue.

Program Clarified

An article appeared in your paper on Oct. 12 regarding the provision of a grant of $63,666 by the provincial government to the Capital Regional District toward the development of Portlock Park on Saltspring Island.

I wish to point out the inaccuracies in your reporting in this article so that future references to the Recreation Facilities Assistance Program will be clear to the public. The program is housed in and administered by the ministry of recreation and conservation, not the ministry of municipal affairs. The ministry has a total budget for fiscal year 1978-79 of $12.5 million, not $400,000 as reported. Confusion may have arisen as the maximum grant to any one facility is $400,000. — John Thompson, Co-ordinator, Recreation Facilities Program, Ministry of Recreation and Conservation.

Children are our country's future. We shouldn't stint their schooling.

Oppose Incumbents

The schoool board elections will be upon us Nov. 18 and I'd like to remind people please not to vote for the incumbent trustees: chairman Susan Brice, Peter Dorazio, Mark Fisher, Bud Smith and Peter Yorke.

Last spring these five were instrumental in having Tolmie elementary school closed — something which should never have happened. The reason given for its closure was that Tolmie's population was too small to deserve the money needed to run it.

There are several schools whose population was smaller than Tolmie's but they weren't closed. And we, the public, are still owing $98,000 on the new annex to Tolmie school, at a rate of $10,000 a year.

The kids from Tolmie are now going to Cloverdale, Hampton Park and Tillicum and this is causing overcrowded conditions in the first two schools. I don't know how much money people are willing to spend on children's education, but I would pay more in taxes if it meant that our future inheritors would have more individual attention in school. And it seems to me that 230 kids are enough to keep a school open.

To me, these trustees have failed to show good reason for Tolmie's closure, and once again I urge people not to vote for them. There are three alternative people I recommend as good candidates: Tom Arkell, Martin Levin and Winifield Mott.

Some people may not know that they don't have to vote for all five vacancies. So they could vote for the three alternatives I mentioned above and leave it at that. Here's hoping we can improve the membership of the school board! — Mary McFadden, 841 Swan Street.

Be Informed

On Saturday, the voters of Greater Victoria will be electing five trustees to the school board of Greater Victoria. Many voters will look over the list of candidates and vote on a number of them without any prior knowledge of the candidates or the issues facing this school district.

Are there issues? Most definitely! First, consider that Victoria's operating budget for 1978 was $30 million, while the Greater Victoria school board's was $45 million. Good reason to cut back, say some. But look again — where are the funds coming from? In the past few years, more and more is coming straight from property owners while the provincial share is steadily decreasing. Is it not then an issue as to whether or not the school board should be working on behalf of the electorate to provide a fairer cost-sharing arrangement with the provincial government?

The school board budget in 1978 increased only 6.4 per cent while inflation was running approximately six per cent. Therefore, cutbacks have been forced upon schools. Many schools now have part-time secretaries, thus forcing many principals to act as school receptionists and taking time from their duties. Schools have been faced with elimination in teacher aides, depriving many children of much needed individual attention. Music programs in most elementary schools have been cut in half. Full-time librarians, especially at the elementary level, are fast becoming an extinct species. Many hundreds of thousands of dollars of media equipment is gathering dust as there are not trained personnel to operate it. Is this economy? Who suffers from these cutbacks? The children!

But many are saying: "I don't have any children; I am concerned about my tax dollar." But all of us are concerned with vandalism, juvenile deliquency, unemployment, increases in crime. And I'm sure most people can see education is a better tax bargain than unemployment insurance, welfare and penal institutions.

Remember the children in school today will determine our future. So be an informed voter and help educate the children of today to become responsible and informed voters of tomorrow — Cora Bradley, 310 Skinner Street.

Appalling Decision

The South Vancouver Island Association for Children with Learning Disabilities is concerned and disappointed at the decision of trustees Williams, Brice, Yorke and Smith to reject money for in-service training for learning assistance teachers.

This is a crushing blow to our organization, whose purpose is to promote and increase the necessary educational support needed for all learning disabled children.

Since approximately 15 per cent of the school population suffers some degree of learning disability, it is not possible to be satisfied with the very small numbers that are currently being helped.

We can only assume that the trustees lack understanding of the needs of learning disabled students. While expressing great sympathy for the problems of learning disabilities, they fail to do anything about it when the opportunity is available.

Unfortunately, these students cannot be swept under the rug and forgotten. They do grow up to be members of our society.

With the correct programs and informed, qualified teachers, these students can progress satisfactorily through our school system with their peers. They can become self-supporting, literate citizens, rather than school drop-outs and life-time failures.

It is much less costly to provide the needed help during the school years than to support welfare rolls or correctional institutions. We are appalled by this decision and would like to know what the school board considers more urgent need than the 15 per cent lost students currently struggling to function in our school system. — Mrs. E. E. Moore, President, A.C.L.D.

'West Coast Archie Bunker'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Speaker Jerome of the House took a lengthy exposition to reach his conclusion that Mrs. Simma Holt, MP (Lib. — Vancouver-Kingsway) may have been affronted by Commissioner Faibish of the CRTC, but her privileges as a member of Parliament had not been breached.

In his exposition Jerome said in several ways that he found the circumstances of the affront to be "shocking", as described by Mrs. Holt. No citizen before a board, let alone an MP, should have been treated in this way. It seemed, felt Jerome, a "most grave" incident.

When Mrs. Holt brought up the case this month she said the commissioner in question at a CRTC hearing in Vancouver grabbed a button or badge she was distributing and threw it away, saying she could "stick it . . ."

On the face of it, the outrage of other MPs was normal. Here was a dutiful MP representing constituents before a federal board and one of its members insults her, physically and verbally. Several MPs thought it an outrage. Such bureaucratic "flunkeys" were getting out of hand. One MP did plead that all aspects of the story should be ascertained before the House did anything.

An outsider may speculate about the cause of Mr. Faibish's actions. Could it be a partisan bias? After all, Mrs. Holt is a Liberal, an aggressive Liberal. Could it have been a simple shock reaction of a man meeting for the first time a public performance by the raucous Mrs. Holt?

The facts seem to be that Mrs. Holt and Mr. Faibish are not strangers. They have met often before. They have had discussions and arguments going back to the early 1960s when she was a newspaper journalist and he was an adviser to Mr. Diefenbaker and the Hon. Alvin Hamilton. Although Mr. Faibish was an aide to the Tories, it was his personal acquaintance, Pierre Trudeau, who asked him to join the CRTC. So Mr. Faibish is both the nominee and a well-known admirer of the prime minister. He and Mrs. Holt share this admiration, for she gives ground to no Grit in her fervor for Trudeau as genius.

So what would lead this middle-aged man, known for his courtesy and kind heart among many people, seemingly to insult a lady, a citizen and MP appearing before this important federal agency?

The answer is simple enough. Mrs. Holt had played a noisy, silly-ass role at the hearing, as she does often. As a public performer, Mrs. Holt seems to me a blend of Kahntineta Horn, Bela Abzug and the late Liverpudlian, Betsy Braddock.

Faibish, a patient man, was driven beyond patience by Mrs. Holt's noisy antics. He felt she was turning a recess in the hearings into an uncontrolled farce. And her basic, simple intent was to fasten badges on to CRTC commissioners which had the stupid slogan "CRTC — Stay out of BC". His manner broke, he snatched the button in her hand, slung it like a frisbee and told her to "Stick it . . ." And he stopped there.

My sympathy tends to be with the commissioner, as you will have gathered. Mrs. Holt seems to me the meanest MP I've observed over the past 21 years. She is like so many bullies. When the treatment coming back is like the treatment she hands out, she bleats and whines and cries unfair. Overwhelmingly, most MPs are responsible, and would never behave publicly like this West Coast Archie Bunker.

U.S. Erects 'Berlin Wall' At Mexican Border Crossing

By JOHN CREWDSON

EL PASO, Tex. — For nearly 20 years, aliens illegally entering the United States from Mexico have been tunnelling under, scampering over or crawling through the rickety chain-link fence that separates downtown El Paso from Juarez, Mexico, and nobody but the Border Patrol has seemed very much concerned.

But when the Immigration and Naturalization Service announced a few weeks ago that it planned to replace what has become a fence in name alone with a new and stouter barrier, cries of indignation rose along both sides of this fragile border.

In short order, the proposed 6½-mile fence became the "Tortilla Curtain," the object of derision and outrage from Mexican officials and Mexican-American leaders alike, a hot political issue throughout the Southwest and the focus of considerable national attention.

"It's an offensive symbol and I don't like it," declared Representative Robert Krueger of Texas, a Democratic senatorial candidate.

"I don't believe that we and Mexico should have any sort of Berlin Wall on our border," said William Clements, Republican candidate for governor of Texas.

Gaston de Bayona, director of international relations for the city of Juarez, called the fence an "ominous and foreboding" symbol, particularly because, he said, "at no time have the relations between El Paso and Juarez been as good as they are now." The two became official sister cities only a few weeks ago.

The fence will be about 12 feet high and constructed of specially hardened, tightly woven steel mesh designed to frustrate wire cutters, and will have a curving portion at the top that, officials hope, will deter potential climbers. It will be built along a concrete embankment that will make it difficult to tunnel underneath.

Apart from the concern over the symbolism involved, much of the opposition to the project, which also includes construction of a similar fence at San Ysidro, Calif., adjacent to Tijuana, is based on the common belief that those who cannot find some way to penetrate the fence will simply walk around it. "I've lived here on this border long enough to see that a fence isn't going to stop anything," said Al Velarde, director of refugee services for the United States Catholic Conference. It was Velarde who christened the fence the tortilla curtain, a name he said he chose "because the Mexicans are going to eat it up."

Immigration officials are quick to agree that the new fence will not be an impervious obstacle. Nor do they suppose that a Mexican citizen who has walked from the Mexican inferior to Juarez will not walk a few extra miles to get around a fence.

At the moment, the border between El Paso and Juarez is the second-busiest crossing point between the United States and Mexico. The busiest is at San Ysidro. In both cities the Border Patrol is plagued with what its officers call "nuisance crossings," Mexicans who literally commute across the border each day to jobs, to shop or sightsee or, in the case of children, to beg or to engage in petty crimes.

As things are now, squads of Border Patrol officers must keep a careful, round-the-clock watch along the river and patrol the streets of El Paso looking for those they suspect of having entered the country illegally. Each month, nearly 11,000 illegal aliens are arrested in El Paso and returned to Mexico, and the Border Patrol estimates that at least five times that number avoid apprehension.

The patrol hopes that the new fence will deter some of the crossers altogether while forcing others to walk to the ends of the fence on the outskirts of town, where officers will be concentrated in greater numbers, and thus deny them the opportunity to blend into crowded downtown El Paso.

Although immigration officials are frankly surprised at the comments the project has engendered, a number of Hispanic rights organizations have been adamant in their opposition.

"When I first heard of it, I thought it was a hoax," said Ruben Bonilla, the executive director of the League of United Latin American citizens. "I could not envision the Carter Administration, with its emphasis on human rights, proposing the construction of a wall between two countries that have historically been allies."

Representative Kika de la Garza, a Democrat from McAllen, Tex., midway in the lower Rio Grande Valley, said he had been advised by senior immigration officials that because of the adverse reaction, the proposed construction project, which will cost about $2 million, had been "put on hold" and was being "re-evaluated" by the Carter Administration.

But immigration sources say that as things stand now the fence will still be built, although one official added that "what we're certainly reconsidering is the design."

The official, Verne Jervis, said the original design called for the use of steel mesh with sharpened edges that might have injured anyone attempting to scale it. The new fence, Jervis said, "won't have sharp edges."

LEVESQUE . . . motherhood and virginity

Levesque's Brilliant Deception

By PETER C. NEWMAN
Maclean's

Halfway through his mandate, Rene Levesque has finally answered the question that has been haunting Canadian politics for most of the past two decades. The solution to what Quebec really wants, it turns out, is a unique relationship with the rest of Canada to be known as "sovereignty-association." Even in a country where one of the major parties insists on calling itself both Progressive and Conservative, this spacey concept ranks high in the lexicon of political absurdities.

Levesque's declaration places him on a platitudinous plateau few Canadian politicians have dared scale. He stands squarely in support of simultaneous virginity and motherhood.

Since Quebec already enjoys the benefits of a full customs and monetary union with the other provinces, Levesque's policy amounts to a brilliant deception.

He has not spelled out exactly how much sovereignty and how much association the Parti Quebecois will be demanding during the referendum campaign. But it's clear that the "sovereignty-association" approach is little more than a trick, a softening of the way toward his ultimate aim of independence.

Compared to the clenched and tainted regime of Robert Bourassa, the Parti Quebecois has run a wide-open administration of provocative partisans who know in their hearts that they're right. But Levesque and his ministers have betrayed the most basic premise of their 1976 campaign: that they would provide good government and leave their independence aspirations in abeyance. Instead, from the morning after election day, nearly every one of the government's actions and policies have been determined by how it might best make the province politically independent. The government's chief and perhaps fatal error has been to enact the militant language and culture policies of Camille Laurin. By proving that protection of Quebec's heritage can be accommodated within confederation, Levesque has jettisoned the most powerful single banner of his chauvinistic crusade.

Without the atmosphere of cultural insecurity, Quebec nationalism has lost much of its sting.

None of this means that the Parti Quebecois referendum will be defeated. Levesque has succeeded in persuading many of the province's voters that preservation of the French-English status quo has become the most radical position of all. By hacking away at Ottawa's presence in Quebec, he is gradually reducing federal involvement in the daily lives of most French Canadians to the national postal service — not the most compelling reason for remaining faithful to the tenets of confederation.

Perhaps the best description of the Canadian dilemma was Montreal comedian Yvon Deschamps' recent wisecrack: "I don't know why the English think of us as inconsistent. All we want is an independent Quebec within a strong and united Canada."

The Name Game

by JOHN EZARD

A year ago the author Leslie Dunkley referred solicitously in print to the full maiden name of a lady who is now Mrs. June Malin, of Omaha, Nebraska.

Mr. Dunkley has just disclosed in the foreword to a new book that Mrs. Malin heard of the reference and has written to say that she does not feel in need of sympathy.

She explains that her father is a man wth a strong — indeed, apparently ungovernable — sense of humor. He gave her the Christian name Ima June.

"I wanted to let you know," wrote Mrs. Malin, "that Ima June Bugg lived with the name a good long time and liked it. I wouldn't have changed it for anything short of marriage."

Mr. Dunkley is now appealing for news of similar sturdy insouciance (or not, as the case may be) among 50 other people whose full names have — as he puts it — "a very sonorous ring."

As listed in the book, First Names First, they include: Amy Watres Cleverly, John Will Fail, Strange Odor Andrews, Mary Hatt Box, Herbert Youle Gotobed, Precious Darling Dare, Welcome Baby Darling, Singular Onions Gallyhawks, Susan Eatwell Burpitt, Abraham Lincoln Death, Henry Will Burst and Corinna Fatman Conkle.

The matter is "not to be treated lightly," Mr. Dunkley warns.

Food Fit for the Devil

By MICHAEL KERNAN
The Washington Post

Like the guy who tried to market licorice Crackerjack.

Now, everyone knows that certain foods go together and have always gone together and probably were invented for each other. Do you think they had pancakes before they had maple syrup? Is it possible to imagine fried eggs without also imagining bacon? Did you ever go to a birthday party where there wasn't icecreamandcake? It was always said as one word when I was a kid.

Yet it is the glory and despair of the human creature never to be satisfied with what is. Ever since Charles Lamb's ancient peasant discovered that if you put a pig in a hut and burned down the hut, the pig tasted better, people have experimented with food.

The centuries have seen some amazing things, quantum leaps in tasting. The Mexicans poured bitter chocolate sauce on turkey and came up with dynamite turkey. The Japanese found that if you slice raw cold fish into slivers and sprinkle it with cinnamon, it is sensational. The Russians dumped some over-the-hill cream in beet soup and created a way of life. And there was that thumb-handed American soda jerk who accidentally dropped a scoop of ice cream into a tall glass of flavored soda water. . . .

Well, we all know the success stories. They are multitude. But progress has its price, triumph takes its toll, and as great-aunt Alberta used to say, into each life some rain must fall. Which brings us, and none too soon, to our subject.

A short parade of culinary also-rans:

—How about some snails with cinnamon and raisins? One knowledgable source swears she was offered this delicacy at restaurant school. It tasted, she said, like spaghetti sauce mixed with rice pudding.

—The British love a dish called Scotch eggs, consisting of a hardboiled egg embedded in sausage, rolled in crumbs and deep fried. And served cold. When you press it with your fork, the purest clear grease runs out.

—A variation of this is called Sausage Toad. The British are so good with names.

—In Vermont I once was served baked whitefish covered with cranberry sauce. It tasted rather good, in fact, but our point here is the concept, not the execution.

—Jamaicans swear by codfish-and-ackee, a kind of stew made with the beanlike tropical fruit, ackee.

—From a California Chinese restaurant comes bean sprouts and avocado, with tiger's milk sprinkled over all.

(To be sure, the Rube Goldbergs of food have always favored marshmallows, from the women's magazine kitchens that gave us sweet potatoes topped by baked marshmallows to those recipes you find on the sides of cereal boxes. Do people actually make cookies out of Rice Kispies and marshmallows?)

—The English comedy team of Peter Cooke and Dudley Moore used to have a skit about a restaurant called the Frog and Peach that served only frogs in peach sauce and peaches garnished with frogs.

But really, we are wasting our time with foreigners. It is America, the home of Tom Edison and Hank Ford and Chuck Goodyear (another inspired klutz who managed to drop some sulphur into some rubber he happened to be boiling and discovered vulcanization), that pioneered the outer limits of cuisine. Who else, I ask you, could have invented:

—Bubblegum ice cream?

—Meatloaf Wellington?

—Beer-milkshakes?

—Lung stew?

—Mashed potato sandwiches?

—Meatless chile con carne?

—Spam?

That's just a skim off the surface. There is more, much more, and perhaps we should't despise these Daniel Boones of the kitchen just because we suspect their eyes are bigger than their brains. Look at Copernicus. I think they deserve our respect and possibly awe as visionaries leading us into a new world, beyond space food.

After all, no one is making us eat the stuff.

Takeover Bid Sparks Massive Counterattack

By JOHN BERRY
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — On Aug. 10 at the Mead Corp. tower in downtown Dayton, Ohio, Dr. Armand Hammer, the 80-year-old godfather of Los Angeles-based Occidental Petroleum Corp., gave the Ohio executives an offer for their pulp and paper company that he thought they couldn't refuse.

But they did. And in the two months since, Mead has answered the Oxy takeover bid with a massive counterattack. The weapons of this corporate battle have been propaganda and legal legerdemain. Right after Hammer and his top executives visited Dayton, Mead hired a passel of high-priced accountants, investment bankers, lawyers and public relations men who immediately began to dig for dirt in Oxy's balance sheet — and they came up slinging.

As a result, the Justice Department has concluded that an Oxy-Mead merger would be anti-competitive and has gone to court to block it. Meanwhile, the Securities and Exchange Commission is scrutinizing Oxy's offering prospectus for Mead to determine if there is any truth to Mead's allegations of questionable accounting by Oxy.

In public documents, the Mead forces have accused Oxy executives of misdeeds ranging from "blackmail" to "fraud" in operating the international energy conglomerate. The record of civil fraud suits brought in recent years by the SEC against Hammer and Oxy have been exhumed, as well as his criminal conviction of making illegal contributions to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Oxy's president and heir apparent to chairman of the board Hammer, Joseph Baird, is described in unflattering terms. The basis for this is that Baird allegedly delivered a $25 million non-interest-earning loan to the Government of Peru, where Oxy has valuable oil and gas concessions. As for Oxy's executive vice-president for finance, John Dorgan, who helped fashion the Oxy offer for Mead, he is dismissed simply as a go-for. "Were loyalty to one's superiors the essential virtue of a corporate fiduciary, Dorgan would rank high," the Mead group says of Dorgan in a public document.

Indeed, Mead's top executives are fighting like men who fear for their very livelihoods — which they probably do. For it seems unlikely that Hammer, who has never been known as a sentimentalist where business is concerned, will choose to retain them if his takeover attempt is successful. But a lot more than a few high-paying jobs is at stake here.

In 1977, Mead had sales of $1.8 billion, net income in excess of $98 million and assets of $1.4 billion, making it the 146th largest industrial corporation in the U.S. Besides pulp and paper, Mead's products include coal, iron castings, chemicals and molded rubber products. What is particularly galling to Mead's chief executive officer, J.W. McSwiney, is that, for the past half-dozern years or so, he has been trying to update the company's old-line operations. More recently, paper company stocks have been performing well, after a period in the doldroms. Mead's earnings — and its stock price — were beginning to reflect these developments when Oxy suddenly stepped in.

Shell Plans To Sell Shares

Ward System No. 1 Vote Issue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven mayoralty hopefuls and more than 100 candidates for aldermen, school board and parks board are on the ballot for today's civic election, but the most controversial vote will be on the plebiscite asking residents if they favor a ward system in the city.

Every major city in Canada except Vancouver elects its representatives by a ward system rather than an at-large system and the issue has become a hot election topic here.

The ward system was abolished in Vancouver in 1935. In 1973, the last time the issue was voted on, a ward proposition was rejected, but only 20 per cent of those eligible bothered to vote on it — and 12 per cent of those ballots were rejected.

Of the three major mayoralty hopefuls, only Bruce Yorke of the Committee of Progressive Electors is strongly in favor of wards.

May Brown, who is running for The Electors Action Movement (TEAM), supports a partial ward system under which some aldermen would still be elected at large, and incumbent mayor Jack Volrich is firmly opposed to both ideas.

Volrich says the narrow perspective of the ward representatives would hamper the city's progress, and that a ward-elected council would become extravagant as aldermen vied for expenditures in their own areas.

Volrich, who was elected under the TEAM banner two years ago, is running as an independent this year with the support of the Non-Partisan Association.

Mrs. Brown, a 58-year-old widow and former parks board chairman, is given the best chance of unseating Volrich.

The second-leading vote getter in her first aldermanic race in 1976, Mrs. Brown has spent most of the campaign attacking Volrich's leadership.

Yorke, who is making his second try for mayor, picked up 14 per cent of the vote when he first ran in 1976.

As well as four other mayoralty candidates, voters will have to choose from 45 candidates for 10 aldermanic positions, 29 candidates for nine school board spots and 32 people vying for seven seats on parks board.

PRESS SIDES MUM

BURNABY (CP) — Both sides in the dispute that has halted production of Vancouver's two daily newspapers since Nov. 1 met with a mediator Tuesday to clarify the issues in the dispute.

Neither side would make any comment after talks ended for the day, but both sides will continue discussions with Peter Dowding today.

They were asked Nov. 11 to meet Dowding following two days of informal discussions with Don Munro, chairman of the British Columbia Labor Relations Board.

Munro had asked for a meeting with representatives of the Vancouver Printing Pressmen's Union and the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild after a complaint by Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the morning Province and the evening Sun.

A company source said the complaint was that the pressmen's union failed to bargain in good faith.

Primary issues are manning clauses for pressmen and company proposals for exclusions from the guild.

The unions' last contract expired Oct. 31.

Vancouver Food Cost Dips a Bit

The price of food in Vancouver decreased by .02 per cent during the four-week period ended Oct. 21, a supermarket survey by the provincial agriculture ministry shows.

The ministry, which makes the purchases and comparisons, said a sharp decline in the fresh fruit component offset several increases in other components.

During the week ended Oct. 21, the basket of food cost $36.14, a difference of one cent from the previous four weeks. This was 11.12 per cent higher than one year ago, and 20.03 per cent higher than two years ago, the ministry said.

Mediator Ordered

Labor Minister Allan Williams said Tuesday he has asked mediator Clark Gilmour to step in and try to end a strike-lockout in four West Kootenay school districts which began Oct. 26.

About 250 non-teaching workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, are involved, forcing most schools in Nelson, Trail, Castlegar and Grand Forks to reduce operations.

The workers' last contract expired June 30.

Nurses Pleased

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia (RNABC) said Tuesday it is pleased with the changes made last week at Vancouver General Hospital by Health Minister Bob McClelland.

McClelland announced Friday that hospital president Larry Truitt had been moved to the role of adviser. Approval was also given to the creation of 60 new nursing positions and a new management structure was revealed, including the post of vice-president of nursing.

Gerry Miller, RNABC spokesman, said McClelland moved a long way to assuring balanced management at the hospital and to improving the quality of nursing care.

"The reorganization announced by the minister is a positive step," he said. "RNABC offers its co-operation and assistance to the new trustees and management of the hospital in working to maintain and improve the quality of care at VGH."

Miller also said that further study at the hospital will convince health ministry officials of the need for additional nursing positions.

Killer Gets Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — Anthony Frank Gerein, 26, of Burnaby was sentenced Tuesday to life imprisonment after being convicted of murdering two men in a pizza restaurant in March, 1977.

Justice Kenneth Fawcus of the British Columbia Supreme Court said Gerein had displayed a cold and calculating mind in the murder of Milton Lampropoulos and John Wipf who attempted to foil Gerein's robbery attempt at the restaurant.

The judge said he agreed with the jury's recommendation that Gerein serve a minimum 20 years before being made eligible for parole.

Savings Lost

WEINSBERG, West Germany (Reuter) — Pensioner Paul Kull, 81, lost his life savings of $33,000 when his sister sold their cast iron stove to a junk dealer. Kull had kept the money in the ash tray of the stove, which brought $27.

Forestry Budget Slash Scored by Munro

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Quoting from a government document, a British Columbia Conservative MP said Tuesday night that a single forest industry company in the United States was spending almost twice as much per year on research and development as the federal government's forestry service.

Donald Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich) said that American universities spent $6 million annually on forest products research compared to the $200,000 spent by Canadian universities.

Munro said the government document questioned the slashing of the Canadian Forestry Service budget by $5.3 million in 1979 while federal aid to the British Columbia Council of Forest Industries, a private group, is being maintained at $2 million annually, for promotion of wood products overseas.

The document, a plea for more government spending on research and development for forest products, stated that federal spending on research and development amounted to $7 million annually in Canada compared with the $14 million spent by the U.S. government.

Canada has about 13 per cent of the world's softwood timber resources, compared to the 11 per cent in the United States.

The document, which has been circulated in Ottawa, notes that Canada's share of world export markets for forest products has declined from 31 per cent to 19 per cent in the last two decades. The U.S. share of foreign markets has climbed from nine per cent to 12 per cent.

The document charges that the annual budget of the Canadian Forestry Service is "one-quarter of the federal science and technology expenditures for each of Fisheies; Energy, Mines and Resources; and Agriculture, in spite of the annual forest products industry contribution of $6 billion to a favorable balance of trade."

"This contrasts with $5 billion for all fuels and minerals, $1 billion for agriculture and $0.3 billion for fisheries."

The document also charges that "the man-years available to the Canadian Forestry Service have decreased by 50 per cent over the last decade during which significant manpower growth has occurred in nearly every other facet of the federal public service."

During question period in the Commons Munro asked Environment Minister Len Marchand if a recent decision to close the Petawawa forestry institute, later reversed under community pressure, had involved input from the professionals at the institute.

Vanished Soldier Found

TACOMA (AP) — A Fort Lewis soldier who vanished when his rented plane crashed near the Montana-British Columbia border was found here Tuesday, military officials said.

Private Jay C. Turner, 18, sparked a wide-ranging search after the wreckage of the single-engine plane was found near Fernie in southeastern B.C. Nov. 5.

Listed as being absent without leave, Turner is being held in the Fort Lewis confinement facility as Army officials continue their investigation, said Bill Wood, public information officer.

Records state Turner rented the Cessna 172 from the Fort Lewis Flying Club the day before the wreckage was found.

When rescuers got to the wreckage of the plane, Turner, an experienced parachutist, was missing and a two-day search failed to produce any trace of him.

Authorities believe Turner deliberately tried to disappear by bailing out of the plane, but they have not determined his motive.

Investigators became suspicious when it was determined that the plane's passenger-side door had been removed, the front seat had been moved to the rear of the passenger compartment and the ignition was turned off.

The missing door was found under a pile of cardboard at a private cabin near the runway at Eureka, Mont.

Wood said Turner, an infantryman, joined the Army last February and was not in any trouble prior to the incident.

8% Isn't Enough: Teachers

Eight-per-cent salary increases which have been the average in school districts that have achieved new contracts will barely cover the increase in the cost of living this year, the vice-president of the B.C. Teachers Federation said Tuesday.

"These are very modest increases," Allen Blakely said in a news release.

Agreements have been reached in 16 of B.C.'s 75 school districts while negotiations have broken off in 10 others, Blakely said.

Disputes not settled by midnight tonight will be referred to binding arbitration, he said.

$8,858 Dry Rot Award

A Saanich man has been awarded $8,858 damages in a B.C. Supreme Court decision because of dry rot found in a boat he bought.

Mr. Justice George Murray ruled in favor of Ralph George Ringle who sued Richard H. Meadows and Associates Ltd., ships surveyors. The suit against Bosun's Marina Ltd., which acted as agent for the owner of a wooden-hulled boat called the Saga, was dismissed because Ringle had not proved the case against the marina.

Murray said Ringle had previously owned a wooden-hulled boat but had no experience in repairing such a vessel.

Ringle contracted with Richard H. Meadows and Associates Ltd. for an expert survey of the Saga and that survey contained a list of defects and added "generally the vessel was found to be only in fair condition and requires considerable expenditure of money to bring it up to a reasonable standard. Except for the items noted in the survey report and without the removals or test-running equipment, there are no apparent major defects at this time."

The survey list referred to various specified areas where rot was found but it turned out that there was dry rot in many, many other areas of the vessel, said Murray.

Most of these areas were accessible for proper inspection and Murray concluded that the firm was negligent in not discovering and listing these other areas in the surveyor's report.

The boat was bought for a reduced price of $11,000 after an estimate was received for repair of defects listed in the survey of $5,000. The actual repairs cost $16,858.

Murray said the Meadows company was in breach of contract and negligent and was liable for the negligence of its employee, Richard H. Meadows.

The damages should be the difference between $5,000 and $16,858, or $11,858. But Murray reduced this difference by $3,000 as an allowance for dry rot which showed up in inaccessible parts of the boat.

'Belated Resolution' Leaves Curtis Uneasy

Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis has taken a shot at Ottawa's funding cutbacks and issued a guarded warning the money better be forthcoming in 1980 as promised.

Curtis on Tuesday released a copy of a telex he sent Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet thanking him for the promise to reinstate municipal service grants after a one-year hiatus.

"B.C. welcomes what appears to be a belated resolution of this problem," Curtis cabled.

"It is deeply regretted that programs which were so enthusiastically announced by you almost one year ago have been the subject of confusion, change and quite unreasonable delay in Ottawa up to this point."

The minister also told Ouellet that B.C. looks forward to receiving the $25.25 million that Ottawa has promised to make available in 1980.

But Curtis apparently doesn't fully trust Ottawa's promises: "We assume that our previous understanding is still in place and would ask you to forward by air express copies of the agreement documents for signature."

Curtis told Ouellet that B.C. plans to immediately implement programs depending on federal government funding on the basis of the federal minister's telex last week.

Ouellet had informed the provinces that the municipal grants program would definitely be reimplemented after the one-year interruption.

Sidney Annoyed By Bawlf Rebuff

Sidney council is upset over the provincial government's refusal to purchase 1,800-acre Sidney Island as a provincial park.

In a letter tabled at a council meeting this week, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said the $3.75 million cost would have a significant impact on the government's ability to purchase other recreational land in the province.

Bawlf noted about 200 acres at the northern end of the island, situated about five kilometres east of Sidney, is already a Class 'A' provincial park, developed for recreational use.

Ald. Ross Martin said he couldn't accept Bawlf's reasons in the light of announced government surpluses and "the alleged bullion" pouring in through the Western Canada lotteries.

Mayor Dick Leigh issued a milder rebuke: "I think an appropriate answer should be we recognize the problems though we do not agree with all of them."

Sidney Island, owned by Victoria resident Jack Todd, has about 15 miles of shoreline and is a major stopover for migratory birds.

Appeal Too Late - Judge

A prosecution appeal of a sentence in a Victoria drug case has been rejected by the B.C. Court of Appeal because it was too late in coming before the court.

Steven John Stewart, 24, also known as David Merryfield and S. Merryfield, was sentenced to one year in jail Dec. 6, 1977, by county court Judge E.J.C. Stewart for possession for the purpose of trafficking of one pound of hashish and four ounces of hash oil.

He was arrested at Victoria International Airport April 28, 1977, while rushing to catch a plane en route to Edmonton. The hash, said to be worth more than $5,000, was found in his suitcase.

The Court of Appeal was told that the sentence has now been served and Stewart has been released.

Mr. Justice Ernest Bull said in his written decision, which was concurred in by Justices J.D. Taggart and W.R. McIntyre, that the Crown was timely in launching the appeal and the sentence was "most lenient under the circumstances outlined to us."

But, he continued, "the fact remains that the Crown, which has control over the whole matter, did not get this appeal down before us, in which a longer sentence of imprisonment was urged, until the expiration of the sentence.

"I (have) said it on many occasions that it is the obligation of the Crown when it appeals, either acquittals or sentences, to get ahead with the job, and there comes a time when irrespective of the merits of the appeal it is too late to press it.

"In my view, that is the situation here and although, as I have said, I consider the sentence lenient, I would not accede to the Crown's appeal and would therefore dismiss it."

Judge Stewart, in sentencing the man to one year, said he took into account the fact that he had spent seven months in custody awaiting trial. Without that, he said he would have sentenced him to two years less one day.

The offender has a criminal record including trafficking in marijuana and MDA.

HEROIN ADDICTION DIFFICULT - DOCTOR

A Vancouver doctor says opiates — mainly heroin — sold illegally are so diluted that true addiction is almost impossible from their use.

Dr. R.G. Schulze, medical officer at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby, says in a letter to the B.C. Medical Journal the main attraction of the drugs is their illegality.

He said he examined 411 admissions to the prison who were identified as heroin users, and although all said they had used heroin in the 24 hours before their admission, 406 had none or only minimal signs of dependence during withdrawal.

Four had moderate signs of dependence and only one had marked dependence, he said. None had severe withdrawl symptoms, and 396 said they had used psycho-active drugs other than heroin in the 24 hours before being taken into custody.

Because the illegal drug is so diluted, Schulze said, its effect is short-lived, and the emotional effects of using an illegal drug, combined with the uncertainty of the substances it is diluted with, far outweigh the physical effects of heroin.

He said the provincial government's compulsory heroin treatment program, scheduled to begin early in the new year, will only increase the cost of illegal heroin, and actually increase the crime problem which is caused by the high cost of the drug.

service with promotion and upgrading facilities.

"CP Rail did not do this in any meaningful way," the Victoria brief says.

There is clearly no basis in fact to sustain CP Rail's claim that the service will continue to be uneconomic, it adds.

It says the work done by volunteers exposes the fallacy of the earlier CP Rail position that the only way to get people to ride the train would be to use measures that would force people to use the train.

"There is no question in my mind that the failure of the E and N to attract passengers in previous years was due to a pre-determined policy by the CPR to abandon the passenger service," Anderson, the MP form Comox-Alberni, said in a letter to the review committee of the CTC.

Douglas, the MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-the Islands, also contends CP Rail has done all it can to downgrade passenger service.

The briefs trucked out reason after reason for continuing the passenger service.

Victoria's submission noted the city has pledged a $1.5 million upgrading of the Johnson Street bridge and in return the city seeks some benefit in the form of improved rail service.

Both the city and the Regional District emphasized the commuter potential for the Western Communities, pointing out that a rail system would avoid congestion problems.

The region also brought economics into play, saying that tourism and up-Island trade brings an estimated $600 million annuallly into the city of Victoria.

"In order to maintain this favorable economic relationship, transportation services including the E and N passenger service, must be improved."

It is also estimated the market which could be served by the E and N passenger service exceeds 600,000 tourists travelling between Victoria and Nanaimo during the summer months.

The region also points to the energy, mines and resources ministry's national energy strategy that says self reliance may only be successfully achieved if serious attention is given to making urban areas more energy efficient.

Rail is one of the most energy efficient modes of trave, the regional brief notes.

The provincial government has also supported efforts to have the rail service continued. It has appealed the original CTC ruling to the courts and the issue is set to go before the federal court Dec. 4.

ing to questions about whether the government accepts the view of the Economic Council of Canada that there is sufficient room to stimulate the economy through tax cuts, said it is not the size of government deficits that are frightening.

Rather it was the rate of growth in deficits in the last two to three years that governments have been trying to control. Combined federal, provincial and municipal spending in the last few years has been about 15 per cent, more than the growth rate of the economy as a whole, including inflation, he said.

Recent government figures show that in 1978, spending by all governments is expected to rise by an annual rate of 12.8 per cent in the first six months compared with economic expansion of 10.2 per cent.

The figure for 1977 was 12 per cent growth in spending, compared with 9.7 per cent economic growth. In 1976, spending growth was 13 per cent compared with 15.8 per cent expansion in the economy.

In 1975, when the federal government imposed wage-and-price controls, government expenditures rose 22 per cent while the economy grew at a rate of 12.1 per cent.

Trudeau said the government must watch that spending does not grow too fast.

Asked if he favored a stimulative budget and whether he thought tax cuts would be good for the country, Trudeau avoided answers.

Mini-World

Major Project Planned at Academy

George Devlin has started negotiations with the provincial government for a lease on St. Ann property

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Big Ben, the Tower of London, and Buckingham Palace will all be re-created in downtown Victoria if a multi-million dollar tourist attraction — the biggest ever tackled on southern Vancouver Island — gets the green light.

Victoria businessman George Devlin, a partner in the scheme, says negotiations have started with the provincial government for a long-term lease on about five acres of the old St. Ann's Academy property on Humboldt Street where the mini-world attraction would be built.

He said in an interview he's met senior government officials, including Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, several times in recent months and they're enthusiastic.

Devlin, who owns and operates the Royal Albert Miniature World in The Empress, said the attraction would involve London landmarks re-created in the form of one/twenty-fourth scale models.

Using such a scale St. Paul's Cathedral would stand 14 feet high, Big Ben nine feet and Nelson's Monument a little over 11 feet.

The models themselves, exact replicas, would be made by Devlin's partner in the venture, KLF House of Dorset, England, which operates a mini-world complex of its own called Tucktonia at Bournemouth.

Devlin said the Victoria scheme was conceived by KLF House which is also planning to build model villages and displays in Cairo, Bermuda, northern England and Indonesia.

While such attractions have been popular in Europe for several years — Madurodam in Holland, Legoland in Denmark and Mini Dome in Germany are the most notable examples — they are new to North America.

"Even Disneyland doesn't have something like this," Devlin said.

He estimates it will cost $3 million to develop the St. Ann's site. He and KLF House would split the costs.

An early plan shows the London landmark display running the full length of the eastern half of the property with the "Thames River" coursing through the middle.

On the other half the plan shows a replica of the Globe Theatre which would be used for an annual Shakspearean festival. There's also an English hedge maze, an adventure playground for children, a pond where persons can run their own models, and a miniature steam train circling the entire area. Models of Canadian landmarks line the route.

Devlin said the design is only tentative because the government has yet to decide what it wants to do with the property. There is talk of using the building as a centre of fine arts. Devlin feels that would be compatible with his mini-world scheme.

He said negotiations have been going on for several months with the government. He is hoping to get a minimum 50-year lease. If the lease arrangements can be completed by the end of the year, the attraction could be open for business within 18 months, or by May, 1980, he said.

The scheme would create about 30 permanent jobs, and double that during the summer.

"Economically, culturally and esthetically speaking I think the idea represents the best use for the land," Devlin said. "The Academy would be converted to what it was originally, a school, and we'd have an attraction that would hold the tourists here at least another half day."

Charter Buses To Continue, Seniors Promised

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, responding to a request from more than 15,000 Vancouver Island senior citizens, will make Pacific Coach Line buses available for charter tours.

His pledge came after 19 Vancouver Island senior citizens groups expressed fears the service will be halted when the charter section of Pacific Coach Lines is sold.

Curtis met Tuesday with Pauline Barker, spokesman for the 19 groups, and assured her of two things.

First, whoever buys the charter service from the government will have to agree to continue to make buses available to all Vancouver Island groups requesting the service, just as Pacific Coach Lines did in the past.

And secondly, if the private enterprise group does not have enough buses available for charter work, the government will make some of its remaining buses available during peak periods to supplement the supply.

In this way, Curtis said, there will be enough buses to carry on the service.

Mrs. Barker said she is delighted.

She had been concerned that the buses might be sold to some company that might not make them available in the Victoria area.

However, Curtis said he gave assurance that part of the terms of sale of the charter bus division is a commitment that the service would be run by private enterprise in the same way it was run by the government.

Mrs. Barker Tuesday presented a brief to the minister showing that in 1977 the members of the senior citizens' groups took 402 charter bus trips with a total of 17,624 passengers.

In 1977, she said, the local Silver Threads group took 128 charter bus trips involving 5,369 people. In the same year, Oak Bay Senior Activity Centre members took 40 trips involving 1,800 passengers and James Bay New Horizons members took eight trips involving 360 passengers.

Earlier, the 120 bus drivers of Pacific Coach Lines offered to buy the whole service from the government to prevent it from being dismantled. The drivers owned the line for four years from 1970 to 1974, until it was taken over by the government.

Curtis said there is no change in the government's plan to sell off all divisions of the company except regularly scheduled inter-city runs.

On the auction block are Gray Lines (a sightseeing bus company) along with the airport service and American escorted tour services.

Bids closed on Oct. 30 but no sales have been announced.

Gov't Asks Ideas For Better Road Signs

The provincial department of highways today invited Victoria hotel owners to suggest improved signs for the Blanshard freeway in an effort to resolve a controversy over an alleged broken promise.

"Maybe the sign could be improved," said Ray Baines, senior information officer for the department.

"If the hotel people come to us with a proposal I'm sure we will give it careful consideration."

Jack Hepburn, spokesmen for the Douglas Street hotels and motels, said he is prepared to do just that.

Hepburn has a Xerox of a proposed sign shown him by the department of highways in May. It reads: City Centre, Meals, Accommodation. It was to have been placed behind Town and Country Shopping Centre on Blanshard and an arrow on the sign would have diverted tourist traffic along Saanich Road.

Hotels and motels did not protest the bypass, he said, on the understanding this large sign would be erected.

Instead, the department installed a sign reading simply: Meals, Accommodation with an arrow pointing to Saanich Road.

"The sign we put up is standard all across North America," Baines said. "It seemed suitable for that location but if the hotel people want something more, if something more was promised them, we would be prepared to take a second look at it."

Hotels and motels report business down as much as 40 per cent since the Blanshard extension was completed and the hotel area was bypassed by through traffic.

Hepburn said that, because of changed traffic patterns, a large sign is needed at the Saanich Road turnoff and, in addition, better signs are needed for traffic going north on Douglas so people heading out of town will know there is accommodation further out on Douglas as well as along the Gorge.

Baines said the department of highways would look at the Blanshard sign but is not responsible for signs on Douglas which would be inside the Victoria City limit and a municipal responsibility.

In addition, any signs on Blanshard inside Victoria City boundary are also be a municipal responsibility, although the department will assist in any way it can, Baines said.

Meanwhile, Victoria MLA Charles Barber has urged Highways Minister Alex Fraser to prepare maps, posters, brochures and signs outlining the new routes before the peak tourist season arrives.

Route information should be distributed to tourists aboard B.C. Ferries, Barber said, so they will be prepared to turn right off Blanshard at Saanich Road.

Better signs must also be erected at the Saanich Road turnoff and on the Island Highway directing tourists to hotel and motel accommodation on Douglas, he said.

"The Blanshard Street extension is a good thing," Barber said. "The correct combination of road signs, pamphlets, and posters redirecting tourist-only traffic to routes 1 (Douglas) and 1A (the Gorge) would make it a better thing."

Would the Old Salts Touch the Stuff Now?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The stone cairn overlooking Esquimalt Harbor in View Royal has a touch of irony in the message it carries.

The plaque, erected by the Thermopylae Club, pays tribute to the "gallant sailors" of the past.

Nothing ironic in that.

It is the latter end of the message that appears out of place. It notes that the ancient mariners had used this place to replenish their fresh water supplies.

Here we are on a tour guided by Al Beasley, View Royal director on the Capital Regional District, tracing the escape of raw sewage throughout the area.

Close to the cairn, tumbling like a river in spite of a rainless two weeks, sewage was spilling down the bank and into the quiet harbor.

Running through what otherwise would be idyllic settings, other ditches emitted a pungent smell that betrayed their contents' origins.

Regional health officer Dr. Allen Arneil says few, if any, will disagree that there is a health hazard in View Royal.

He says correction of the problem on an individual basis would be costly and, in some cases, impossible.

Arneil says a communal collection system of some kind appears to be the only answer.

On Saturday, for the fourth time, View Royal residents will vote on sewers.

Beasley is convinced he and his neighbors have reached the crossroads.

View Royal residents at a Tuesday night meeting in All Saints Parish hall supported him in his stand that now is the hour.

John White, long-time opponent of sewers and chairman of the Sewage Options Committee, was accused by one resident of stalling sewers for six years.

"We could have had it for one-quarter of what it's going to cost us now," White was told.

Applause greeted a woman's statement that "we never had a better deal to get it done."

White admitted that septic systems like his own, which he proposed as one alternative to View Royal's sewage problem, had been outlawed by health authorities.

A resident of View Royal since 1971 and its volunteer fire chief for 21 years, Beasley knows the area well and says there are at least 100 malfunctioning septic tanks that threaten the quality of life in View Royal.

He voted against the condominium development in which he now lives because of the lack of sewers.

Having fought for sewers for 10 years, Beasley is hoping the financial picture this time will win an affirmative vote.

Figures show that a home with 75-foot frontage will cost about $169.36 a year to be hooked into the sewer system. Over 25 years this amounts to $4,250.

Being able to hook into the trunk sewer planned to serve the new Helmcken Road hospital will reduce over-all costs to View Royal residents substantially. The provincial government will contribute $3,624,000, federal government grants will amount to $214,000 and residents will pay $1,377,000.

"For $4,000 over 25 years we can get sewers. It costs $3,000 for a septic tank and you have no guarantee," Beasley says, adding that rock makes it impossible for some areas to install adequate septic tank systems.

Without sewers, Beasley says, it is impossible to create a workable community plan.

Man Jailed for Assault

A 25-year-old member of the armed forces was sentenced in county court Tuesday to 30 days in jail for indecent assault involving an 11-year-old girl.

Thomas Gerald David Favel, convicted for the same offence several years ago, was also placed on probation for two years and ordered not to drink and to seek counselling for his drinking problem.

Judge Jack Cowan said he was impressed by the submission of Favel's lawyer, Mike Hutchison, who urged consideration be given to only a term of probation, but the nature of the offence could not go unpunished.

"You have to straighten out your life," Cowan told Favel.

Hutchison argued that Favel, who had been drinking, went to a woman's apartment in Esquimalt Nov. 25 and found himself in bed with her daughter but thought it was a friend of the mother. Hutchison said there was no suggestion of violence and was a mistake on Favel's part, although that was not a justification.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Favel knew previously there were two young children at the home and suggested that the story of a mistake should not be believed.

In other cases, Judge Cowan told Steven Frank Graham, 19, "I hope you take advantage of the leniency being shown in this case and the court will not see you again."

Graham had pleaded guilty to armed robbery involving $5 in which a motorist who picked him up talked him into going to his apartment where they had drinks and Graham offered to return the money but said he would only go out and rob someone else.

He was given a suspended sentence, placed on probation for two years, ordered to seek alcohol counselling and must perform 150 hours community work service.

Defence counsel Ted Hanman said Graham remembers little of what happened although alcoholic amnesia was not a defence. The circumstances were extremely mitigating and so bizarre that the offence was unlikely to occur again, he said.

Birkett said that with some misgivings the prosecution was prepared to "take a risk" and agree with a suspended sentence and probation.

Cowan said the offence did not contain the same elements one might anticipate in an armed robbery.

Sandra Gail Ballendine, 25, was given a suspended sentence, placed on probation for one year and ordered to perform 50 hours community service work. She pleaded guilty to theft of two federal government cheques worth $242. Restitution has been made.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The preliminary hearing into a charge of second-degree murder against three men opened Tuesday before Judge Harold Alder in provincial court.

Charged in the July 21 death of 37-year-old George Preston Gus of Port Alberni are 24-year-old George Alexander Charlie and 32-year-old Alfred Eugene Johnny, both of 639 Constance, and 25-year-old William Charles August, of no fixed address.

Gus' body was discovered lying on a scrap metal heap in a vacant lot at 1614 Store at about 7:25 a.m. He had been severely beaten, possibly with a wooden club found nearby.

The hearing is scheduled for four days this week.

Robert Arthur Henderson, 46, received a six-month term, to be served consecutively to time now being served.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Henderson failed to return to the Pandora Correctional Centre in Victoria from a day parole pass on Nov. 29, 1976. The pass allowed Henderson to be out until 11 p.m.

Henderson was not captured until earlier this month, nearly two years after he escaped. He was sentenced Nov. 2, 1978, in Vancouver to four months for fraud, Mulligan told the court.

Henderson was working as a cook at The Empress at the time he went missing and was considered a model prisoner, defence counsel said.

Henderson was serving three consecutive terms of five years each for false pretences and armed robbery when he escaped, Mulligan stated. He was not due for release until May 28, 1983.

Gary Allan Smith, 20, was handed a two-month, consecutive sentence after he pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large from the Redondo Bay prison camp near Campbell River on July 16.

Mulligan said Smith went missing along with a small skiff and was not caught until Aug. 9.

Smith had been given an 18-month jail term Jan. 24, 1978, in Victoria and was not due for release until Jan. 9, 1979, court was told.

Defence lawyer Martha McNeely said it was a spur-of-the-moment decision by Smith, who admitted it was a stupid thing to do.

Two youths charged with stealing a poppy fund container with $27.79 in it at the Strathcona Hotel on Saturday were remanded until today for plea.

Thomas William Armer, 17, and Ernest James Ponton, 20, both of no fixed address, were charged with theft under $200 and possession of stolen property.

Ponton was released but Armer was detained in custody until today for plea and bail hearing.

A 24-year-old man charged with three counts of breach of probation was also ordered detained in custody until today.

Brian Michael Jacobson, no fixed address, was charged with two counts of failing to report immediately and as required to a probation officer and one count of failing to make restitution of $563.50 within eight months of release from prison as ordered by Judge Blake Allan in Victoria provincial court on Dec. 16, 1977.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Brian Koster, 20, of CFB Work Point, $450; Wayne Edwin Young, 33, of 3143 Admirals, $375; and Harold Richard Pearsall, 56, of 1224 Pembroke, $350.

In addition, Pearsall was fined $250 for refusing a breath test demanded made by police.

SOCIAL WORKERS TO CONFER

The question of the survival of health and welfare services during the current period of budget restraint will be discussed at the third annual fall institute of the B.C. Association of Social Workers which begins here Friday.

Dr. Walter Young of the University of Victoria's political science department will speak on the subject at the banquet Friday night.

Other features of the three-day institute at the Empress, co-sponsored by the social workers' association and the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., will be a workshop on child abuse by Shirley Marcuse, child abuse co-ordinator in Calgary.

There will also be workshops on death and dying, alcoholism, working with extended care patients and menopause.

June Preston, president of the social workers' association's Victoria local, said the focus of the institute will be on social and health issues which are of concern to both professional groups sponsoring the event.

PIRATE OUTFIELDER LANDSLIDE WINNER OVER GARVEY

Parker Voted Most Valuable in NL

NEW YORK (AP) — Slugging Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates, the National League batting champion for the last two years, was named winner today of the National League's Most Valuable Player award for 1978 by a landslide vote.

The menacing left-handed hitter, who batted .338 in 1977 and .334 last season, collected 21 of a possible 24 first-place votes and a total of 320 points in balloting by a select committee of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

First baseman Steve Garvey of Los Angeles Dodgers, who did not receive a first-place vote, finished second with 194 votes, edging shortstop Larry Bowa of Philadelphia Phillies. Bowa collected the three first-place votes not accorded to Parker for 189 points.

The voters, two from each of the National League's 12 cities, voted for 10 players. Points were awarded on a 14, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 basis.

After Bowa, outfielders took the next four places, with Reggie Smith of the Dodgers fourth with 164 points, followed by Jack Clark of San Francisco Giants (107), 1977 MVP George Foster of Cincinnati Reds (104) and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia (48).

Gaylord Perry of San Diego Padres, this year's Cy Young award winner, finished eighth in the MVP balloting with 45 points. Rounding out the top 10 were outfielders Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh (39) and Dave Winfield of San Diego (37).

"This is the greatest thing that ever happened to me in my baseball career," said the elated Parker, the first Pittsburgh player to win the MVP award since Roberto Clemente in 1965. The only other Pirate player to receive the honor was shortstop Dick Groat in 1960.

"I'm pinching myself to see if I'm really awake," said Parker, who has batted over .300 each of the last four years.

In addition to leading the league in batting, the massive 6-foot-5, 235-pound Parker rapped 30 home runs, third behind Foster's National League high of 40 and Luzinski's 35; drove in 117 runs, second behind Foster's 120; tied for second in triples with 12, and stole 20 bases.

"It's nice to send a ball out of the park, but my purpose in playing is to give a good all-around performance and give the people their money's worth," said the 27-year-old Parker.

"My goal for 1979 is to win the Triple Crown (the batting, home run and RBI titles)," added the Pirates' right fielder. "I got my home run swing going good this year and if I can stay healthy next year, I will shoot for the Triple Crown. I believe in myself."

Parker was not completely healthy during the 1978 season. He suffered a broken left cheekbone in a home plate collision with catcher John Stearns of New York Mets during a game on June 30. Surgery was required and there is a permanent wire in Parker's jaw.

After the surgery, Parker was playing again in 16 days. To protect the injury, he sometimes wore a football-type helmet when he ran the bases. He used a football helmet and a goalie's hockey mask when he batted in practice. Then he decided to use the standard baseball helmet when he batted in games.

The broken cheekbone caused Parker to fall into a batting slump, his average skidding from .315 to .288. But he regained his top form.

Earlier in the season he had played with a broken finger.

"With the fractured finger and the broken cheek and doing as much as I have, I'm satisfied," Parker said.

Adams' Goal Wrecks Winter Hawk Strategy

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Good techniques are like intentions. They're nice to have but meaningful only if they work out.

Strategy almost worked for coach Ken Hodge and his Portland Winter Hawks but a late goal by Greg Adams, his second of the night, took Victoria Cougars off the hook and the Western Hockey League teams had to settle for a 5-5 tie Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

The Hawks were generally dominated and out-shot by a one-sided 18-7 margin in the first period when, Hodge resorted to strategy.

"When in trouble, ice the puck," Hodge ordered his players after the first period.

"I figured it (the tactic) might slow the Cougars down," he confided later.

It almost did. Tied 1-1 after the first period and 4-4 after the second, the Winter Hawks appeared headed for victory on Joel Elliot's quick third-period goal. Portland protected a 5-4 lead for almost 16 minutes but the 19-year-old Adams shook off the checking of Al Szott to score Cougars' equalizer at 16:12 of the final period.

Still, Portland's "to-heck-with-finesse" attitude did seem to work. It chilled Victoria's early threats of a rout and possible victory until Portland's defense and forwards were able to work some cohesion into their game.

The splitting of points enabled Cougars to protect their two-point hold on first place in the Western Division while embarking on an important six days. Victoria plays five games in six days against divisional rivals. Cougars play in New Westminster tonight, in Portland on Friday, Seattle here Saturday and then conclude the week in Westminster on the Sabbath.

Adams, a rookie who counted more than 100 points for the affiliated Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League last season, also scored the opening goal for Victoria. George Fritz, Todd Morton and Geordie Robertson, on a brilliant individual effort, scored Victoria's other goals.

The Cougars, despite outshooting Portland 39-28, didn't look quite as sharp as they did in Saturday's 3-1 victory over New Westminster.

For one thing, Victoria forwards, particularly the wingers, didn't come up with as strong a two-way game against Portland as they did against New Westminster.

There was another reason, as offered by four of the eight National League scouts in attendance Tuesday.

"They were playing a different team. Portland is a much stronger-skating team than the Bruins."

That was the reason shared unanimously by scouts George Woods of Vancouver, Barton Bradley of Boston, Del Wilson of Montreal and Ken Chisholm of Washington. Their opinion also was shared by Cougar coach Jack Shupe and, more modestly, by Portland manager Brian Shaw.

. . . second was best

"Victoria," said Shaw, "has an excellent team. I don't think there's a team in the league that skates better or works harder than the Cougars with the exception of the guys in the red (Portland uniforms)."

There also was a third reason that may spelled difference between winning and losing. Defence. Brown, Babych and Blake Wesley, more offensive minded than any of Victoria's rearguards, came up with top-flight defensive performances.

Victoria's rookie-infested defense, on Tuesday, was more prone to mistakes. Even Todd Morton, Cougars' best, was the fall-guy on two Portland goals.

Another of the game's standout was Portland netminder Bart Hunter. Twice helped out by the goal-posts behind him, Hunter came up with several sparkling saves to contribute greatly to the tie. He was particularly impressive in the first and second periods to prevent Cougars from grabbing an early, and perhaps solid, advantage.

Hunter capped his efforts with a game-saving stop with less than 30 seconds remaining when he blocked a shot by Victoria's Bob Jansch. It was that kind of a night for the 18-year-old Jansch. He was one of the Cougars to hit a goal-post and also was deprived of goals on great chances on two earlier occasions.

In the only other game played Tuesday, Medicine Hat Tigers padded their hold on third place in the Central Division by tripping Calgary Wranglers, 8-4.

BRUINS PAD WORLD CLUB

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — New Westminster Bruins, the defending Memorial Cup champions, will add eight players from other junior hockey teams before heading to Sweden to represent Canada at the world junior hockey championships.

Bruin coach Ernie McLean said Tuesday he thinks one team with several additions will have a better chance to win than the junior all-star team he coached to a third-place finish in the world junior tournament held in Canada last January.

"With players from right across Canada, we didn't have enough time to get a team feeling together," said McLean of last year's squad. "My personal thought is that this club will be better."

McLean said the Bruins will leave for Sweden Dec. 19, the day after the club plays an exhibition game against the Moscow Selects in Vancouver.

The team will play two exhibition games in Finland and one in Sweden before the tournament opens Dec. 26 in Karlstaad. The Canadian team's first game is Dec. 27 against Finland.

The other teams in the tournament will be the Soviet Union, which won the January tournament, Sweden, West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Norway and the United States.

Three players to be added to the Bruin lineup will come from the Brandon Wheat Kings, also of the Western Hockey League. They are right-wingers Brian Propp and Ray Allison and defenceman Brad McCrimmon.

Two other WHL players — defenceman Keith Brown of the Portland Winter Hawks and left-winger Errol Rausse of the Seattle Breakers — will also join the Bruins.

Other additions will be Yvon Joly, a right winger who plays with the Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association, goalie Roland Melanson of the OHA Windsor Spitfires and defenceman Raymond Bourque of the Verdun Black Hawks of the Quebec Major Hockey League.

The Pearl Returns To Electrify Knicks

By Canadian Press

Earl The Pearl is back and—despite sinking just one basket—his presence made all the difference Tuesday night.

The crowd of 16,728 at Madison Square Garden gave Earl Monroe a one-minute standing ovation when he was introduced before Tuesday night's game between New York Knicks and Denver Nuggets. The Pearl received another ovation when he entered the game late in the first quarter, and another when he hit his first shot, a baseline jumper in the face of Denver's Bobby Wilkerson.

That was his only basket of the game, but his presence in a New York uniform had an electric effect on the fans, whose cheers seemed to inspire the rest of the Knicks to their 106-100 National Basketball Association victory.

"The fans were beautiful," said Monroe, who missed the first 15 games of the season because of a contract dispute. He agreed to a one-year contract during the weekend—the same time general manager Red Holzman fired Willis Reed and took on the dual role as coach.

"Three weeks ago, I had doubts I'd be back," said Monroe, the only remaining veteran from the Knicks' 1973 championship team. "You never know if they'll let you sit out the season. But I thought if I didn't play in New York, I wouldn't play anywhere else because I love this city."

Elsewhere Tuesday night, San Diego Clippers downed Indiana Pacers 109-106, Los Angeles Lakers whipped Milwaukee Bucks 137-119, Washington Bullets dumped Cleveland Cavaliers 122-106, New Jersey Nets beat Philadelphia '76ers 124-108 and Portland Trailbazers upended New Orleans Jazz 123-103.

Monroe described his play as "10 per cent of nothing" and said it would take about two weeks to get in top shape.

The Knicks now are 2-0 since Holzman replaced Reed, and a major factor has been improved defence. They limited Boston to 98 points and Denver to 100.

"Defence is the main thing that Red stresses," said forward Spencer Haywood. "The team is more relaxed and enthusiastic, and the fans are playing an important part."

Ah, the fans. Denver coach Larry Brown credited them with the victory.

"We were right there at the end, but we didn't do the little things you have to do to win a close ball game," he said. "The fans really had them pumped up. Once that happens, it's awfully tough to win on the road."

Ray Williams led the Knicks with 26 points, 22 of them in the first half, and Bob McAdoo scored 25.

Elvin Hayes scored 26 points, Bobby Dandridge 25 and Kevin Grevey 24 as Washington handed Cleveland its fivth straight loss and the 11th in its last 12 games.

Maurice Lucas and Mychal Thompson combined for 45 points as the Portland big men dominated in downing New Orleans.

SPECTRUM GIRLS CAPTURE BERTH IN ISLAND MEET

Laura Piete and Monica Moore set a hot serving pace Tuesday as Spectrum captured a berth in the Vancouver Island high school girls' volleyball championship with a 15-3, 15-8 decision over Nanaimo in a playoff at Mt. Douglas.

Capitals Show Up Flames In Shootout

By The Canadian Press

Tuesday night's showdown at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., figured to be a shootout—pitting the National Hockey League's most prolific scoring machine, in the form of Atlanta Flames, against one of the league's most inept clubs to date, Washington Capitals.

But the lowly Capitals rose to the occasion and, despite being unable to dampen the Flames' offensive clout, managed to beat them at their game and post an 8-7 victory.

In other NHL games, Colorado Rockies and New York Islanders played to a 2-2 tie, while Los Angeles Kings defeated St. Louis Blues 4-2. In the lone World Hockey Association contest, New England Whalers tied Birmingham Bulls 5-5.

Atlanta coach Fred Creighton, who had seen his club score 75 goals in its first 16 games while putting together a 12-2-2 record, decided to give goaltender Yves Belanger his first taste of action this season after Dan Bouchard had handled the duties in the first dozen games.

And after just three minutes, the bewildered Belanger knew he was in for a rough night, having watched three pucks sail past him for goals. Bob MacMillan raised his league-leading, goal-scoring total to 12 with two goals for the Flames in the period, but the Capitals got two more past Belanger in the period and carried a 5-2 margin into the second.

But the quick-striking Flames, the Patrick Division leaders, struck for five consecutive goals after Tom Rowe had opened the scoring in the second for the Capitals to give Atlanta a 7-6 lead midway through the final period.

However, the Capitals didn't quit after squandering their four-goal lead. Rick Green's goal with 7:40 remaining tied the score, then Rowe's second goal of the game, on a backhander with 1:16 left, won it.

"This is a game I can point to and say 'Remember the Atlanta game, how we came back in that,'" said a relieved Washington coach Danny Belisle. "This type of game makes them believers."

It also makes coaches like Belisle—who saw his club win its season opener and then go 1-10-3 in its next 14 starts—age quickly.

"I went from 41 to 51 tonight," he quipped.

MacMillan wasn't too impressed with Washington's victory.

"It's easy to come out flying when you score on your first couple of shots," he said. "It gets everybody going. I can't give them a whole lot of credit."

At Uniondale, N.Y., Barry Beck's breakaway goal with 2:14 to play pulled Colorado into the tie with the Islanders. However, the one point was enough to move the New York club into a second-place tie with the cross-town Rangers in the Patrick Division, five back of the Flames. It was the Islanders' fifth consecutive game without a loss.

Meanwhile, the Rockies now have gone eight games without a victory, losing five and tying three, and are last in the Smythe Division, two back of the Blues and eight off the pace of front-running Chicago Black Hawks.

Power-play goals in the final period by Danny Grant and Randy Manery, plus an empty-net score from league scoring leader Marcel Dionne, powered the Kings over the Blues. The victory also allowed Los Angeles to move into a second-place tie in the Norris Division with Detroit Red Wings, eight points off the pace of first-place Montreal Canadiens.

In the WHA contest, Dave Keon's two third-period goals, including one which deflected in off the stick of Birmingham defenceman John Stewart, pulled New England into a tie, not only with the Bulls on the night but with Cincinnati Stingers and Quebec Nordiques—both idle—for the league's top spot.

Louis Sleighter and Rick Vaive had two goals apiece for the fifth-place Bulls, who trial Winnipeg Jets by one point and the three leaders by six.

Trouble Stays With the Jets

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association have had little respite from trouble since they won the Avco Cup last spring.

First, Swedish superstars Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson completed their pre-arranged jump to New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

Bobby Hull, the last surviving member of the "hot line," packed it in last month for personal reasons.

Speculation continues about John Ferguson, former coach and general manager of the Rangers, coming to Winnipeg early in the new year and of possible management changes following his arrival.

And if that wasn't enough, rumblings now are being heard of disharmony between coach Larry Hillman and newcomers acquired from Houston Aeros after that franchise folded.

"We didn't please each other at the start and still haven't come to great harmony," Hillman says of the Houston additions.

"Maybe it's because I mentioned them more frequently than others in discussing this team. You know, the owners, the public and even the media expected a lot from one line and maybe I expected too much, like everbody else."

Hillman was referring to the line of Morris Lukowitz, Terry Rusowski and Rich Preston, all former Aeros, and all unable to match the pace of Hedberg, Nilsson and Hull last season.

"Nobody can replace the players who left," Hillman continues. "I can't keep relating the Houston guys to the big line."

Going into tonight's game against Quebec Nordiques, the Jets had won only six of their first 15 games of the regular season. Three losses in a row left them in fourth place, barely ahead of Birmingham and Edmonton in the league standings.

Seattle Kingdome Now a 'Cooldome'

SEATTLE (AP) — Action on the basketball floor isn't sending chills down the backs of players and fans in the Kingdome. It's the heating system.

The heating problem no longer is "on a back burner," says Kingdome manager Ted Bowsfield, but it may not be fixed for a month.

Bowsfield explained that temperatures dipping into the 30s and upper 20s (fahrenheit) at night, coupled with a simple matter of physics, is causing the chilliness in the lower levels of the domed stadium.

Each of the 16,394 arriving fans brought in a small cloud of cold air and let out a corresponding amount of warm air. Inside the dome, the cold air settled to the level of the playing court.

The Sonics warmed up in time to win the National Basketball Association game 109-95, but a solution to the greater warm-up problem won't come so easily.

Bowsfield admits that officials knew there was a problem but explains, "It was on a back burner somewhat because most of the time we haven't had too serious a problem with the weather."

Six hot-air blowers were ordered about a week ago at a cost of $3,500 for installation over the entrances, Bowsfield said. He estimated it would take two weeks to a month for them to arrive and be installed.

Each blower "sends down a curtain of hot air about two to three inches wide," Bowsfield explained. "As you walk through it, the hot air will seal up behind you and keep the cold air on the outside while letting us keep the warm air in the building."

Meanwhile, the Sonics play 10 of their 14 games during the next month at the Kingdome.

"I don't know of any adjustments we can make until they (the blowers) arrive," said Ron Cline, Kingdome manager of operations and maintenance.

"If you get the floor area where it is hot, the people on the 300-level are in a sauna," Cline said. "It's almost impossible to get it totally comfortable on the arena level and not have the people on the 300-level dying of heat prostration."

Kluane Park Planners Deserve High Marks

All of our provincial resource agencies could take a lesson from the federal team currently setting up a master plan for Kluane National Park in the Yukon.

They should especially note the way public participation is solicited at each stage of the three-step process.

It reminds me in many ways of similar planning efforts in the United States, where the public is offered several alternatives based on a number of guiding principles.

Such an approach is infinitely preferrable to the ad hoc approach toward planning any resource use in British Columbia — where secrecy appears to be the rule at every turn and nothing is spelled out in logical sequence right at the start.

Kluane National Park, encompassing 8,500 square miles, was established in 1972 and proclaimed as a park in 1976. Located in the southwestern corner of the Yukon, it includes the largest non-polar glacier system in the world and Mount Logan, at 5,950 metres (19,520 feet) the highest peak in Canada.

The Kluane plan, reflecting both professional and public input, is guided by the following major principles:

★"Kluane possesses a wide variety of unique and significant resources which require special recognition and protection. Special Preservation Areas will be designated and management procedures for each area will be developed.

★"The natural processes taking place in Kluane National Park will be allowed to continue with minimal interference.

★"Public access into Kluane National Park will be controlled to maintain its wilderness character and to protect its natural features.

★"An appreciation of the park's wilderness character and the importance of preserving it will be the main objective of the interpretive program.

★"Recreation activities and facilities at a level of development compatible with the character of Kluane National Park will be encouraged. Priority will be given to non-motorized activities.

★"Commercial visitor accomodation and related services will not be developed in the park. Instead private interests will be encouraged to develop these facilities outside the park, along the Alaska-Haines Highway corridor."

Within these general constraints, the four alternatives which arose out of a combination of research studies and public contributions offer a wide variety of options ranging from complete protection to "the maximum development of visitor opportunities appropriate to Kluane."

The planning process is now entering the final stage and the team is in the process of drawing up a final draft plan.

It should be ready for final public input this coming spring.

Anyone wanting to receive detailed information is invited to write: Parks Canada, Public Participation, 114 Garry Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3C 1G1.

Although most of the process has been completed, there's still time to make your feelings felt. And, for once, it's nice to be asked rather than told.

After all, we're paying the shot.

Free-Agent Status Claimed for Murdoch

TORONTO (CP) — Right winger Don Murdoch, currently serving a National Hockey League suspension of at least 40 games as the result of a drug conviction, will become a free agent if New York Rangers fail to renegotiate his contract, Murdoch's agent said Tuesday.

Frank Milne of the International Management Group, which represents several hundred athletes in all major sports, said Murdoch's contract with the Rangers has legally expired.

"I have had meetings with the legal people from IMG and it is our contention that Donnie can declare himself a free agent," Milne said in an interview. "Unless we can renegotiate the contract by the end of next.week, we will be reviewing our legal position.

Although Murdoch signed a three-year contract with an option, Milne claims he had the right to renegotiate if he scored more than 50 goals in his first two seasons. Murdoch scored 32 goals in 1976-77 and 27 last season.

The Rangers view the situation in a different light.

"Our legal people interpret the contract differently from Murdoch's legal people," said Mickey Keating, Rangers' assistant general manager. "We want the boy, we're in his corner and we will be working his thing out."

Murdoch was fined $400 in Ontario provincial court last April 24 after pleading guilty to possession of cocaine. NHL president John Ziegler subsequently suspended Murdoch, whose salary is reported to have been $120,000 a year.

Clarke Takes Curling Lead

The Brad Clarke rink took over sole possession of first place in the Men's Super League of Curling at the Racquet Club Tuesday with a 9-8 victory over a rink skipped by Bob Hawkes, with whom Clarke had been tied.

It was the fifth win against one defeat for Clarke.

There is a three-way tie for second between Hawkes, Steve Skillings, who defeated Ted Jurista 10-3, and Barry Harvey, a 7-2 winner over Al Frame. All have 4-2 records. Jurista and Frame are 2-4.

Don Matheson (2-4) defeated Don Edl (1-5) 11-5 in the other game.

Spoils Pile Grows Higher Despite Speed 'Shortage'

TORONTO (CP) — While both the United States and Canadian equestrian teams claim to be critically short of speed horses, they keep picking up most of the spoils in speed classes at the Royal Horse Show.

At the International Hit and Hurry competition Tuesday night it was Dennis Murphy of the U.S. team who stole a last minute victory from Canadian rider John Simpson of Calgary.

The Hit and Hurry requires a rider to cover as many fences as possible within a time limit of 60 seconds. A cleared fence counts two points and a knock down one.

Riding Do Right, one of the finest speed horses around, Murphy was the only rider able to clear 16 fences for 32 points, good for the win and 10 points in the standings.

Simpson rode Commander Jack to 31 points and edged out two other horses with equal points on his faster time.

But perhaps the two leading countries here have an argument when claiming shortage of speed horses.

None of the other U.S. or Canadian riders were able to place in the top six.

Third place went to Graeme Thomas of New Zealand, riding Henley, and fourth was Lieut. John Roche of Ireland with Lough Crew.

Both came in with the same score but slower times than Simpson.

The American team now is within striking range of the Canadians who hung onto their lead on Simpsons's second place finish.

Canada still leads on 77 points, but the U.S. is threatening with 70. Ireland and Belgium are out of the race with Ireland having 33 points and Belgium 19.

Simpson, however, continues with a fair lead as the leading rider. Adding six points to his total, he now has 29, ahead of Murphy with 22 and Ian Millar of Perth, Ont., with 20.

Vikettes Top SFU, But Vikings Falter

BURNABY — University of Victoria Vikettes came out on top but UVic Vikings were beaten in exhibition basketball action against Simon Fraser University here Tuesday night.

Vikettes topped their hosts 60-44 while Vikings ran into foul trouble in the second half and dropped an 89-77 decision to the Clansmen.

It was the first meeting between Vikings and Clansmen since the Canada West conference decided to allow its teams to schedule exhibition games against Simon Fraser, which has been banned by the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association because of its scholarship policy.

Vikings led 33-30 at half time but lost the use of their entire starting forward line after the break.

Reni Dolcetti, who scored 26 points over-all, drew his fourth foul early in the second half and was used sparingly until fouling out with about two minutes left to play. Gerald Kazanowski also came up with four fouls and Chris Hebb fouled out.

Ian Hyde-Lay was the only Viking shooter other than Dolcetti to reach double figures. He contributed 10 points.

Jay Triano, one of three Clansmen on the national team, set the pace for the host club with 22 points and Kirk Randa added 18.

Simon Fraser outrebounded Vikings, 47-35.

"Neither team played very well. They didn't have a very good first half and we stumbled in the second," he explained.

"We ran into foul trouble and hit only 13 of 24 free-throw attempts. We missed in six bonus situations in the first half alone."

Vikettes were sparked by a 26-point effort from rookie Jane Favali while Luanne Hebb added 10.

ALS SIGN TAYLOR TO REPLACE HARRIS

MONTREAL (CP) — The Alouettes think they may have found the player to replace injured cornerback Dickie Harris for the Canadian Football League's Eastern Conference final against Ottawa Rough Riders this Sunday.

Bruce Taylor, who refused offers from Montreal in 1970 because he was a first-round draft choice of the National Football League's San Francisco '49ers, joined the defending Grey Cup champions on Tuesday after eight years.

"I feel like a kid who ate his cake and kept it too," said Taylor after joining the Alouettes. Taylor, 30, tipped the scales at 180 pounds and measured an even six-feet in his physical for the Als.

He played cornerback for eight seasons with San Francisco before being cut after suffering a hamstring pull in training camp prior to the 1978 campaign.

ABC To Televise NASL Games

NEW YORK (AP) — Five North American Soccer League regular-season games and three playoff games each in 1979 and 1980 will be televised by ABC, the league and the network announced Tuesday.

"It's a tremendous landmark as far as we're concerned," said Phil Woosnam, NASL commissioner.

"The time is right for network television coverage of soccer," said Jim Spence, vice president in charge of ABC sports, said at a news conference.

The program will run between May and July, with a Cosmos at Tampa Bay game May 12 tentatively set as the first telecast.

LA Signs Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers announced Tuesday the signing of free agent Derrel Thomas, a veteran infielder-outfielder, to take the place of three other free agents the National League champions have lost.

Thomas, 27, a seven-year veteran, entered the free agent pool after playing out his option with San Diego Padres. Better known for his glove than his bat, Thomas hit .227 last year in 128 games.

Three Dodgers—pitcher Tommy John, outfielder Billy North and utilityman Lee Lacy—played out their options last season and won't return.

Delalla Nets 24 To Lead Whyettes

Yeta Delalla fired 24 points to lead Whyettes to a 69-37 victory over Vidalin in Victoria Senior "B" Women's Basketball League play Tuesday at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Ellen Gaines added 16 points for Whyettes.

The Ice Radial is the tire that Goodyear built to take on the worst ravages of winter and get you through safely. The secret is in the special rubber compound that stays "bendable" – even at below freezing temperatures – to conform to icy road surfaces.
This is Goodyear's finest traction tire, built tough with Flexten cord belts – pound for pound stronger than steel. It also has a unique tread design with hundreds of biting edges for traction on ice as well as in snow.

TIEMPO ALL-SEASON RADIAL
A new kind of tire for every kind of weather.
Here's the all season steel belted radial that meets the requirements of the British Columbia motor vehicle act for winter tires.
This gas-saving radial is built tough with double steel belts. Takes plenty of punishment, lasts much longer than bias-ply tires. In summer, the centre 'whisper' rib gives you a quiet ride over hot roads. In winter, the computer-designed tread (with some 10,000 biting edges) gives you snow tire traction – even on glare ice.

Borg-Beater Scores Victory At Stockholm

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — John McEnroe captured the men's singles title in the $175,000 Stockholm Open tennis tournament Monday night, whipping Tim Gullikson 6-2, 6-2 in an all-United States final.

The final was the most one-sided in the tournament since American Arthur Ashe trounced Dutchman Tom Okker by the same score in 1974.

Cowens Celtic Player Coach

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran centre Dave Cowens, a fiery redhead noted for his aggressive, hard-nosed play on the court, was named player-coach of Boston Celtics Tuesday in a shocking move to rebuild the National Basketball Association club's sagging fortunes.

Cowens, an eight-year veteran from Florida State who just turned 30, confidently predicted better days ahead for the Celtics after accepting the challenge offered by new owner John Y. Brown and president and general manager Red Auerbach. "I'm very flattered that Mr. Brown and Red even considered me for the job, but we're not going to win because of my smarts," Cowens said. "The players will have to win by playing better together, playing as a team."

Cowens, who walked out on the Celtics for two months two years ago to, "get away from it all," was picked to lead the one-time dynasty in one of the team's most dismal periods. Boston is off to a 2-12 start after failing to make the playoffs last season.

Cowens, given a pay raise to a reported $300,000 a season on a multi-year contract by Brown last month, replaced Tom Sanders, who took over as head coach when Tommy Heinsohn was fired last January.

Sanders will remain with the Celtics as chief of scouting and a member of the public relations staff. K.C. Jones and Bob MacKinnon were retained as assistant coaches.

"My first concern is player response and respect" Cowens said at a news conference. "Actually, I never recall envisioning myself as a coach. I've always thought of a coach as a motivator. Now I'll have to find someone else to motivate me. My primary responsiblility will still be as a player."

Cowens becomes just the second player-coach in the Celtics' 33-year history. Bill Russell, one of the game's all-time greats as a centre, served as player-coach from 1966-69, winning NBA titles in his last two years. "We tried this experiment with Bill Russell, and it worked," said Auerbach, who led the Celtics to nine of their first 13 NBA Championships before turning over the job to Russell. "It's a question of Dave's motivating the players, and more importantly, motivating himself."

Brown and Auerbach decided a coaching change was neccessary after the Celtics' 128-123 loss to Detroit on Sunday. They met with Cowens Monday to discuss the situation.

"We sat around and all of a sudden, John asked Dave if he would like to coach," Auerbach said, "His reaction was favorable. We talked some more, but instead of saying yes, Dave said he wanted to think about it. He went home and talked with his wife, Debbie, and others. Five hours later he came back and gave us his answer."

GABRIEL SIGNS FOR THIRD SEASON

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Gabriel has signed a new one-year contract to coach Seattle Sounders of the North American Soccer League.

"The club was very fair with me indeed," Gabriel said in announcing his signing for a third season.

The Sounders won the Pacific Conference title in 1977, Gabriel's first year, but lost to New York Cosmos in the NASL championship game. Gabriel said his goal is to take the Sounders back to the Soccer Bowl.

KEENELAND SALES TOP $100 MILLION

Keeneland took in $15,744,100 on Tuesday to boost the yearly gross to $102,809,800. The figure also eclipsed the record $88,097,400 taken in during four sales in 1977.

Tuesday's top price was for Crimson Lass, in foal to Raise A Native. Ted Curtin, acting as agent for Nelson Bunker Hunt of Dallas, Tex., paid $410,000 for Crimson Lass, from the consignment of Crimson King Farm of Lexington. In the afternoon session, Roba Bella, a nine-year-old broodmare in foal to Good Counsel, brought $400,000.

A Keeneland spokesman said 132 horses were sold during the afternoon session for $6,606,200, an average of $50,047, while five stallion shares were sold for $257,000.

During the evening session, 125 horses sold for $7,871,600, an average of $62,973, and 15 stallion shares were sold for $1,009,300.

Nyet, Says Elina of Drug Charge

The gold medal winner on pommel at the 1976 Montreal Olympics and this year's world championships in Strasbourg, France, won only his specialty at the Ontario Cup 78 gymnastics championships Tuesday night at Maple Leaf Gardens.

But his margin of victory on that one apparatus—10 points—gave him a big lead after two events and he needed only a conservative performance through the remaining four events to win the men's all-round championship.

The women's title went to Elina Gurina of the Soviet Union, who gave an emphatic "nyet" when asked if there was any truth to reports that Soviet and Eastern European countries were tampering with the normal female growth patterns by using a "brake" drug.

However, it was difficult to understand through her interpreter whether she didn't want to discuss the issue or if she was simply replying to the question of whether she knew of its use.

"They just don't want to talk about it," the Soviet interpreter said. "It's just nonsense."

There was no nonsense in Gurina's performance earlier in the evening, however, as she easily outclassed a field of nine while winning the uneven parallel bars and floor exercises, both with 9.70 scores, and sharing the balance beam exercise with Steffi Kraker of East Germany—9.80s—while amassing 38.85 points.

Magyar's score on the pommel horse was 9.70 and his 56.35 points from the six events gave him the over-all victory.

Andrzej Szajna of Poland took the second-place silver with 56.25 followed by East German Andreas Hirsch, 56.20 points. Warren Long of Montreal, winner of the vault with a 9.60 score, also got high marks on the pommel horse and high bar and finished a surprising fourth.

Owen Walstrom of Victoria finished 10th.

While Gurina didn't start competing until 11—"Many of our gymnasts start much earlier, like six or seven years," she says—she had the basics of the sport drilled into her early by her father, a gymnastics coach.

Kraker finished in a second-place tie with Eva Ovari of Hungary, both with 38.30 points.

Margin Sliced, But Still Huge

It was somewhat less one-sided than was than the last encounter, but although Saanich Braves had the margin reduced, they still managed to maul Kerry Park Islanders 17-1 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Tuesday night at Pearkes Arena.

Braves scored 33 goals against Kerry Park in their previous contest.

Ed Beauchemin set the pace for Braves with five goals, Murray McLaren added three and doubles were fired by Phil Varcoe and Scott Connors.

Sea-Walk Cash

The Provincial Capital Commission has issued a further $25,000 grant to Victoria for another segment of the sea-front walkway in Vic West.

The latest grant will fund the Maitland-Robert street portion at West Bay.

The commission has invested more than $500,000 in the project so far, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said.

Valley Drainage Stalled

A proposal to spend $4 million for a surface drainage system in Victoria's Haultain Valley was stalled by Ald. Bob Wright Tuesday.

Wright complained that the city doesn't have adequate long range planning and refused to vote for a $50,000 design study for the storm drain project.

He said governments at all levels seem to be spending money without due thought for the long-term consequences.

Wright was told the proposal was discussed extensively at budget meetings last spring and council had decided the proposal was worthwhile.

But Wright, who missed the meetings, said he was still opposed to the $4 million project.

Margaret Mead Dies Of Cancer at 76

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Margaret Mead, well-known U.S. anthropologist, died today in hospital which she entered Oct. 2 for treatment of cancer. She was 76.

She moved to the forefront of her profession by publishing in 1928, at age 26, what has become one of the most widely read pieces of scholarship ever penned, Coming of Age in Samoa.

In the half century that followed, she continued studying far-away ancient cultures and used the knowledge to anticipate and shed light on the social and cultural eruptions of modern Western society.

As scientist, author, teacher and lecturer she was one of the few establishment figures of recent decades to hold the ear of the young on matters such as sex and marriage, generation gap, drugs and feminism.

She was not, however, universally idolized by their elders.

"This dirty old lady" was what Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida called her after she told a U.S. congressional committee that marijuana should be legalized, not for its own sake, but because banning it was "damaging . . . relations between young and old."

While she stressed the importance of family, Miss Mead also believed that "marriage is a terminable institution" and she herself was married and divorced three times.

She infuriated some feminists when she described Women's Liberation as "essentially a middle-class movement" spurred by "career-drive."

Short and round of figure, she took command of her listeners with a warm, mellow voice and easy, informal delivery.

Her personal hallmark in later years was a shoulder-high walking staff, actually what the English call a thumb stick, which, with the capes she liked to wear, gave her an air of a biblical sage.

Born in Philadephia, where her father was a professor at the Wharton School, Miss Mead was brought up in a variety of homes and as an adult was ever on the move. The most permanent home she ever knew probably was her office at New York's Museum of Natural History.

She was hired as an assistant curator and given a small attic room in 1926. Over the years, returning from travels with artifacts to store, she kept expanding her domain until she had taken over a turret of the castle-like structure. She eventually became the museum's curator of ethnology and also occupied chairs of anthropology and sociology at Columbia and Fordham universities.

A sense that time was running out for studying primitive cultures drove her to the Pacific islands in a race against the encroaching modern world. In return visits after the Second World War, her own eyes—and adults she had studied as children—told her the old island ways were no more, she said.

She was the chronicler of those otherwise unrecorded cultures in works such as Growing Up in Samoa, Sex and Temperament in Three Primitive Societies, Social Organization in Manua, Kinship in the Admiralty Island, Balinese Character and Mountain Arapesh.

Another was Growing Up in New Guinea, on which her second husband, Dr. Reo Fortune, a New Zealand anthropologist, collaborated. They married in 1928.

Her first husband, in 1923, was Luther Cressman, an aspiring clergyman and later an archeologist. An English anthropologist, Gregory Bateson, became husband No. 3 in 1935 and was her partner subsequently in field work in Bali and New Guinea.

Hopefuls, Residents Differ On Industry

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Industry kept rearing its head at a Saanich election meeting Tuesday night and for six of nine aldermanic candidates it was not an ugly head.

But for most of the audience at Holland House, on Vanalaman Avenue — just up the road from the rejected but never-say-die Royal Oak industrial park — the vision was apparently as lovely and desirable as a slum.

Question after cynical question on numerous aspects of the industrial park proposal was directed at the candidates supporting it.

Name the industries which would move in if the industrial park became a reality.

Why would they do so when cheaper industrial sites were available elsewhere in Greater Victoria? How would the candidates reverse the trend of industry leaving the area to relocate on the lower mainland?

And so on throughout most of the evening, until candidate Irene Block said in desperation: "Let's bury the darn thing. I'm sick and tired of hearing about it, aren't you?"

Only she and incumbents John Mika and Mary Casilio declared that they were opposed to industrial development at either Royal Oak or the Interurban site favored by Mayor Mel Couvelier.

The third incumbent, Ian Cass, said he supported the Royal Oak plan because he believes Saanich should have a site ready for when industry wanted to move in.

Other candidates also in favor of the Royal Oak site for industry were former alderman Sandy Noel and Don Smith.

Maxwell Tracy, Robert Bowcott and Henry Tyson supported the need for industrial development but did not commit themselves to site preferences.

When one resident tried to pin down Bowcott on the point, the candidate imvited him to "tell us where you want it."

"Gordon Head," the man replied.

NO ANGEL, BUT . . .

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Salvail, identified at Quebec crime inquiry hearings as an underworld figure in Sorel, Que., wants Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard to hear his side of the story. "I'm not an angel, I know, but I don't think I'm a bandit," Salvail wrote in a letter from Miami to the minister. Salvail faces extortion charges in Shawinigan, Que., and an arrest warrant was issued when he failed to return from Miami last week for his trial. Salvail has been charged in Miami with illegally entering the United States.

Grizzly Gas to Flow

Gas from the controversy-ridden Grizzly Valley will begin to flow next week when Premier Bill Bennett flies into the area to officially open the $100 million 90-mile Westcoast Transmission pipeline.

Bennett, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips whose executive assistant Arthur Weeks was fired for stock dealings in the valley, and other government officials fly into Chetwynd to open the line Nov. 22.

Weeks, Phillip's constituency secretary and two B.C. Petroleum Corp. geologists lost their jobs over the incident.

Dili Fights Back From Scars of War

DILI, Indonesia (Reuter) — Although the scars of the bitter civil war that preceded the merging of East Timor into Indonesia are visible on its buildings, this little seaside capital seems to have recovered from its ordeal.

After the Portuguese colonial rulers departed in December, 1976, pro-Indonesian forces, later aided by regular Indonesian troops, defeated left-wing Fretilin independence guerrillas in an eight-month civil war.

East Timor virtually has been cut off from the outside world since then but now the remaining Fretilin guerrillas roaming the mountains are thought to number less than 250.

Ther has been no census, but provincial officials say Dili's population has risen to about 40,000 from 25,000 before the chaotic departure of the Portuguese and the civil war.

Most of the houses and business premises destroyed or damaged during the fighting have been rebuilt and repaired, and many new buildings are going up.

The port and airport of Dili recently were reopened by the government and as of August, both Indonesian domestic airlines, Garuda and Merpati, fly at least four times a week to East Timor.

The harbor, once the scene of heavy fighting, is a picture of peaceful activity. Piers and warehouses have been repaired and upgraded so that general freight ships can be handled at the same time.

One of the most striking changes since colonial times is not evident to foreigners unless they were here while the Portuguese were in charge.

People now walk the tree-lined, paved streets in the centre of Dili, and children play noisily outside the offices of Gov. Arnaldo dos Reis Araujo, who spent 29 years in jail as a subversive element under Portuguese rule.

In colonial times, native East Timorese were forbidden to step on the paved roads. No one, certainly no children, was allowed near the seat of the provincial administration.

Hordes of neatly uniformed school children, in a territory where 95 per cent of the population still were illiterate after more than 400 years of Portuguese rule, are another symbol of change.

Life has changed greatly in Dili. Although its people eventually will forget the language of their colonial rulers, their Portuguese heritage will be felt for a long time.

It is not just the many signposts and inscriptions that have not yet been changed from Portuguese to the Indonesian language, nor so much that the city's layout and architecture are typically Portuguese.

What makes Dili an undeniably Portuguese-influenced city is the attitude of its people and their way of life.

King George Land Swap Approved

A 200-square foot piece of Walbran Park on Gonzales Hill will be traded for an equal area of private land to avoid rock blasting and interfering with a homeowner's privacy.

Approval of the plan, initiated by Robert Napier, 80 King George, was given Tuesday night.

Napier said he planned to subdivide his land at that address into three lots but had difficulty creating access without blasting a large rock that would impair his neighbor's privacy. By swapping a 20 by 20 by 20 foot triangle for a similar corner of the adjoining park, suitable access would be given without interference, he said.

Bylaw Overhaul Set

A review of commercial zoning bylaws affecting redevelopment proposals in Oak Bay should be made in detail early next year, council's zoning committee recommended Tuesday.

Chairman Ald. John Goult, who is not running for re-election this week, said it was inappropriate for him to take part in the review with only a few days remaining in his term of office.

The study was urged by a recent council meeting when it was realized there is a lack of control over redevelopment projects on commercially-zoned land, which can result in larger structures, greater density, more traffic and heavier utilization than for premises being replaced.

The review is expected to recommend limits on a generally-applied rule allowing three-storey structures, control site coverage and floor areas according to the application, and adjusting densities to fit the situation.

Aldermen were taken by surprise recently by the development of a small supermarket at Cadboro Bay and Estevan, where they believed a small corner store would be built. They are concerned about repetition in that area, on Oak Bay at Monterey, at Cadboro Bay and Bee and at Windsor and Newport.

JUVENILES BLAMED

Oak Bay police believe juveniles are responsible for three recent evening break-ins in the Willows area.

A police spokesman said entry was gained by forcing rear doors or windows in each case.

About $250 in cash was taken.

A Heraldic Blessing Due For Civic Crest?

The oak cluster, snow-capped mountain and marine vista known as the Oak Bay crest may get heraldic recognition through a bequest.

Council was told the registry of armorial bearings in London would charge 600 pounds sterling — about $1,400 — to do the proper research and legal registration. But aldermen balked at the cost when the subject came up last week.

At finance committee meeting Tuesday they learned there is money available in the $100,000 legacy left to Oak Bay for a project of lasting benefit by the estate of Florence M. Payton in memory of her brothers Harry, William and George Earle.

Most of the bequest is expected to go into a community recreation project, a small golf course at Henderson Park.

Ald. John Goult was instrumental in the move to register the crest featuring Mount Baker and Haro Strait as seen from Oak Bay. He visited the offices of Her Majesty's Marchmont Herald and Lyon Clerk in London two months ago and received a letter from John George, Pursuivant of Arms, assistant to the herald clerk describing the procedure for registration.

The facts to be provided must include the statutory authority for Oak Bay; the full name, style, rank, qualifications, and decorations of the petitioner; population, principal industries and other relevant local details for the information of the Lyon Court when it considers the request.

Ratepayers Rap CJVI Coverage

A Victoria radio station has been accused of giving unfair coverage on the controversial industrial park referendum to be held Saturday in Saanich.

The Royal Oak Community Association has asked the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to investigate a one-hour program aired over CJVI last Friday.

Cedric Steele, co-ordinator of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and Barry Mayhew, Greater Victoria's Economic Development Commissioner, appeared on the program to discuss the relative merits of locating the park at either Interurban or Royal Oak.

Association president Ben Pires said area residents should also have been given an opportunity to speak on the issue but were completely ignored.

He said the chamber is spending about $1,000 on a campaign to promote the establishment of an industrial park in Saanich.

Barrett Urges Terrace Aid

NDP leader Dave Barrett Tuesday called on the Socred government to be specific on its offer of aid to the storm-ravaged Terrace area.

He also demanded the date of the next session of the legislature be announced.

Following a caucus meeting, Barrett said the governments general promise of aid to the northern residents who lost their homes in the flood isn't enough.

He added his party is concerned about the lack of specifics and wants the Bennett government to make the same deal the NDP did with the Port Alice residents who suffered losses in mudslides.

The NDP guaranteed 100 per cent on the loss of homes and 50 per cent n the loss of furnishings to Port Alice slide victims.

Prince Rupert MLA Graham Lea reported to the caucus that the loss to individuals in the area will likely amount to $15 million.

The people of Terrace deserve the same confidence and peace of mind that the Port Alice residents received from government, Barrett said.

The former premier also said the current government obviously has no plans for solving growing regional unemployment.

The Socred government's $2 million advertising campaign raising the expectations of British Columbians is scandalous, Barrett said.

"People are watching the ads telling them what good shape the province is in before going down to collect their unemployment insurance or welfare cheques," he said.

"If the Socred have anything to back up their ads then they should call a new session to implement their proposals."

Clear-Cut Choice Offered to Voters in Saanich

The development future of Saanich dominates the 1978 election issues and heading the list is the persistent controversy surrounding the proposed industrial park.

On both the broader philosophy of development and the specific questions of whether an industrial park is needed, and where, voters have a fairly clear-cut choice between the nine candidates for four vacant seats.

They will also have an opportunity to express their views on the industrial park issue in a referendum Saturday.

Of the three incumbents seeking re-election, Mary Casilio and John Mika opposed both industrial park proposals that were rejected earlier this year, in the Royal Oak and Interurban areas.

Casilio, who has earned respect for her work as the municipality's first ombudsman, is bidding for her third term.

She says she supports "controlled and orderly growth" for Saanich provided its environmental qualities can be protected.

Mika, chairman of the environment committee, says he regards Saanich as a community of people to be consulted and served, unlike some who see it as a market to be manipulated and exploited.

He also views himself as a representative of the ordinary resident.

"The vested interests in wholesale development already have the newspaper publishers, real estate advertisers and Victoria Chamber of Commerce, as well as some aldermen, to speak for them," he adds.

The third incumbent, Ian Cass, voted for the Royal Oak proposal but against industry on Interurban.

He deplores the dissension and personal feuding which, he claims, has destroyed much of council's effectiveness in the past two years.

Cass considers himself an independent, not committed to any group or lobby. He says he will continue to work for public transit improvements and to encourage home ownership.

William (Sandy) Noel, a former 12-year veteran of Saanich council, echoes some of Cass's sentiments on council disunity.

He says his return from retirement to the political front is prompted by a desire to restore to council the harmony necessary for effective administration.

A supporter of the Royal Oak industrial park plan, he says: "I am my own man and not affiliated with any partisan group or organization."

Making his second attempt at winning a council seat is Henry Tyson, a former general manager of B.C. Steamship Company and previously manager of marine operations for Candian Pacific.

He feels this administrative experience can be put to good use in serving Saanich, where he has lived all his life.

The owner of acreage in the Blenkinsop Valley, Tyson disagrees with the blanket development freeze in the valley because he says much of the land is rocky or of poor quality, unsuitable for agriculture.

Another valley resident, first-time candidate Donald Smith, is president of the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers Association which has criticized the land restrictions.

Smith, a distribution designer for B.C. Hydro, says he doesn't want to see wall-to-wall development in the Blenkinsop Valley but he believes some easing of controls could be permitted in certain areas.

He says council should approve an industrial park at Royal Oak, developed by private capital at no risk to taxpayers.

Salesman Maxwell Tracy, another newcomer to the Saanich election scene, says if elected he would initiate action to roll back the substantial salary increases which council members recently awarded themselves.

The increases don't comply with anti-inflation guidelines or the spirit of voluntary restraint, he says, and could spark unprecedented demands by the unions.

Tracy strongly favors an industrial park in Saanich as a source of jobs and tax revenue.

Businessman Robert Bowcott also advocates the encouragement of non-polluting light industry and commercial development, with the three-fold aim of expanding Saanich's tax base, strengthening the area's economy and providing jobs for citizens.

He says he is concerned with the development of long-range planning policies to ensure the orderly growth of Saanich, including the establishment of greenbelt areas.

He believes his 20 years' business experience has demonstrated a sound decision-making ability which could be beneficial to the municipality.

Secretary Irene Block claims her record of attendance at council and committee meetings gives her the background knowledge to become a competent alderman without the delay of a learning period.

"I am dedicated to the defence of the principle of neighborhood integrity and reject plans for industrial sites where they are more strongly opposed than supported by local residents," she says.

Mrs. Block says one way of encouraging the economic health of the region may be through incentives to small business. In particular she is investigating the graduated business tax used in Winnipeg, as an alternative to the local flat-rate tax.

Oak Bay: No Big Issue, Just Same Old Concern

Two incumbents, a former alderman and a police board member are competing for three Oak Bay council vacancies in civic elections Saturday.

Lacking a single major issue, candidates express continuing concerns such as the mounting cost of doing municipal business, economizing, holding property taxes down, growth of regional powers and preservation of Oak Bay as a quality residential area.

There are 12,275 eligible voters among a population of about 18,000.

Terry Reksten: English-born, B.C. resident since the age of five, University of B.C. graduate, married to a civil engineer, two daughters, Oak Bay resident since 1969.

A member of Victoria city council heritage advisory committee, she is also acting chairman and senior member of Oak Bay police board. Her interests include membership in the Hallmark Society and writing on historical architecture.

Reksten said as a member of council it will be difficult to justify tax increases to her and value must be demonstrated.

"I am determined to preserve Oak Bay's pleasant residential character," in essentially single family dwellings, she said, with commercial elements contained within the village and developed parts of Cadboro Bay Road.

Norman Pimlott: Oak Bay resident more than 25 years, insurance manager, former merchant, alderman 1969-77, recreation commission member and president of Silver Threads in Greater Victoria.

Pimlott cites his experience on council's finance, zoning, personnel, lands and buildings committees, and in planning the recreation complex and library-activity centre. He also helped plan two retirement housing projects in Oak Bay.

His priorities include holding the tax line, restricting regional authority, opposing the transfer of transit buses to the regional district, pressing for removal of school financing from property taxes as promised by the provincial government, and manning police and fire departments through common-sense policies. He also endorses the "charm and quality of life which is characteristic of this municipality."

Shirley Dowell: Incumbent, Oak Bay resident 29 years, eight years an alderman, regional director, regional hospital executive, vice-chairman library board, volunteer community worker.

Aiming at zero-base budgeting in the municipality, Dowell is conscious of controlling taxes and capital expenditures like McMicking Point sewer outfall. She seeks $500,000 from the province in lieu of taxes on University of Victoria lands in Oak Bay.

Oak Bay village should be designated a special zone enabling council to control building design and setbacks, with patrolled, two-hour parking limits.

Douglas Watts: Incumbent, professional engineer, married with four children, senior alderman with 18 years' service, served on most council committees, vice-chairman Greater Victoria Water District.

Aware of rising municipal costs, Watts urges spending restraint and the use of zero-base budgeting for best tax dollar value, plus a provincial grant based on university holdings.

A Miracle Needed on Fleet Street

London Times Faces Shutdown Over Automation

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — The Times and The Sunday Times, two of Britain's most notable papers, will lock their doors on Nov. 30 unless a miracle in labor relations takes place.

Few on hard-boiled Fleet Street believe in miracles. There are even fewer believers on Gray's Inn Road where the two papers are published.

Dugal Nisbet-Smith, general manager of The Times newspapers said, "There is a very strong possibility we will have to suspend. I would hope for not more than a few days."

Does that mean he thinks the odds favor a shutdown?

"If I had to bet," he replied, "yes."

Owen O'Brien is general secretary of the National Society of Operative Printers, Graphical and Media Personnel. He represents 2,200 of the two papers' 4,300 employees and he is as gloomy as Nisbet-Smith.

'They've Gone to the Brink'

"They (management) have gone to the brink," he said. "It will be very difficult to stop them from going over."

It is almost inconceivable that The Times and The Sunday Times would remain shut forever. A dispute as complex and bitter as this one, however, could produce consequences that none of the parties now foresee.

This remarkable state of affairs has come about because The Times management, plagued by constant stoppages, has decided to clean out at one stroke all of Fleet Street's historic make-work practices, stop wildcat strikes, and win acceptance of the newspaper industry's new labor-saving technology.

The Times, said Nisbet-Smith, is "standing up to the troublemakers and saying enough is enough."

Until last year, the daily Times, with a circulation of 293,000, has been a consistent money-loser. The Thomson family, which has owned it since 1967, and the tax authorities have sunk an estimated $40 million into The Times. Staunchly conservative and erratically edited, the paper is the preferred reading of older academics and clergymen, higher civil servants, politicians and some businessmen.

Both papers, in turn, are part of a Thomson empire that includes lucrative provincial papers in the U.K. (plus 50-odd daily papers in Canada and the U.S.) as well as a travel agency, insurance companies, hotels, an airline, a television station and, above all, a rich slice of North Sea oil. The new Lord Kenneth Thomson, who took over at the death of his father Roy in 1976, has made it clear he has the resources to support an indefinite shutdown of the two papers and won't sell out to any of the many would-be buyers who want their prestigious nameplates.

The Sunday Times, with a circulation of 1.4 million, makes money more years than not. One of the world's liveliest serious papers, it is famous for detailed inquiries into sensitive subjects usually swept under the British rug.

"We are making a very bold attempt to achieve reasonable industrial behavior, to negotiate against severe overmanning and to bring in a new technology," Nisbet-Smith said.

"Our people will have some hardship but against this kind of attack you have to put up a defence," O'Brien replies. "It's a question of take it or leave it. We won't go cap in hand."

Last April 26, The Times management notified the general secretaries or national chiefs of the five major unions it bargains with that the two papers would suspend by Nov. 30 unless management won all the changes it sought.

To speak of five unions, however, oversimplifies Fleet Street's quaint practices. The Times in fact deals with 54 different locals or chapels, each representing different steps in newspaper production. The chapels are fiercely independent, and each must approve its own deal.

The Times' proposals would do the following:

—Wipe out 200 of the 450 jobs in the composing rooms of both papers. Linotype operators, stereotypers, copy-readers and others would be eliminated by the new, computerized typesetting systems that enable reporters to set their own stories.

—Eliminate two-fifths of those now manning presses, a move that would affect about 350 persons, many of whom work just one night a week at The Sunday Times.

—Reduce a clerical staff of 850 by 100 to 200. Even now management cannot say how many will go because of the switch to computer operations.

—An unbreakable guarantee against wildcat strikes that cost the two papers one copy in five during the first three months this year.

In return, the company says it will not force any full-time worker to leave but will let natural attrition achieve management's goals. In addition, Nisbet-Smith is offering to share what he says are two-thirds of the savings with the remaining staff.

Wages, pensions, vacations and sick pay would all increase. Nisbet-Smith refuses to say how much, but he does figure the package is worth millions of dollars — $11 million alone for pension improvements — and will increase the pay and fringe benefits of those who remain on the payroll by more than 20 per cent.

Why has The Times decided on so many radical changes now? Nisbet-Smith figures that the papers have lost $3.5 million in profit from unsanctioned strikes this year, equal to both papers' combined earnings last year. In the first three months alone, there were 21 stoppages at The Times, nine at The Sunday Times and seven on the three literary and education supplements.

"It was a totally unprecedented level of industrial disruption," he says.

Not Interested in Newspapers?

Union representative O'Brien has another theory. "The new Lord Thomson is not so much interested in newspapers as the first lord.

The first Lord Thomson delighted in the glory of owning the two Times newspapers and dining with editors and prominent people at the plant. His son rarely leaves Toronto.

Some journalists on the papers think that management's frustration at implementing its new $5 million computerized technology also spurred the decision. Nisbet-Smith acknowledges that teething problems, especially with software, sharpened management thinking.

Finally, the successful efforts of American papers to reduce pressroom personnel were carefully studied by Times executives.

"We recognize change is taking place, that new technology is coming in," O'Brien said. "But the company is trying to clean up the sins of Fleet Street overnight."

Nisbet-Smith replies that everything must be solved in one bold stroke or "management credibility would run out.

Don't Shoot! People Live Here

GARLOCK, Calif. (AP) — Dodging bullets has become a way of life for the only two residents of this Mojave Desert ghost town. They say city dwellers — who don't think anyone lives in the town — come to Garlock to act out their shoot-'em-up fantasies.

"Sometimes it sounds like a war is going on out here," said Roberta Starry, 66, who moved to Garlock 18 years ago with her husband, Jack. "Not long ago, at least a dozen people were shooting in all directions. It's crazy."

Starry, 76, said visitors to this former mining town 200 kilometres northweast of Los Angeles often shoot into their home, and several of his pets have been killed by stray bullets.

"We have to take cover," he said. "One shot recently struck the wall right above where I was sitting in our living room."

The Mojave substation of the Kern County sheriffs department about 50 kilometres away is responsible for patrolling a large area which includes Garlock. However, police said no complaints had been received from the couple.

Mrs. Starry lived 11 years in Garlock before marrying and is the author of two books about old mining towns at the foot of the El Paso and Rand Mountains. She is also a desert landscape painter.

When she and Starry married, they decided to make Garlock their home. Their nearest neighbor is eight kilometres away.

Shooting off guns is not the only amusement of the modern marauders. They also have driven into Garlock in the middle of the night and torn down old buildings that once housed saloons, boarding houses, stores, a Wells Fargo stagecoach office and a post office.

"On Easter Week nine years ago, 30 Hell's Angels (motorcycle gang members) drove into the museum and rock shop I operated in one of the old stone buildings," Starry recalled. "They drove their bikes into the showcases. They left the place in shambles."

That incident helped convince the Starrys to put in a telephone — and pay the $325 cost of stringing a line to the town.

For more than two decades starting in the 1880s, Garlock was prosperous, and the Starrys say as many as 2,000 persons lived there. Now eight old buildings remain, many of the others torn down board by board, the lumber hauled out on the desert and used for campfires.

"As long as we live we will never be able to understand why people find pleasure in shooting everything in sight, or get their kicks damaging or destroying old historic buildings," Mrs. Starry said.

Hunters Ahead Six-Zero

OTTAWA (CP) — There they stood. . . 1,000 well-armed, red-coated hunters lined up to get a crack at 20 "government-surplus" moose in a previously quiet and peaceful forest area near here.

The score after the opening round is hunters six, moose none. But the hunt goes on until Sunday, or until the body count in s complete.

The hunters lined up, some as early as 4 a.m. Monday for the hunt in the Larose Forest, a 20-square mile area of Crown land about 25 miles east of Ottawa. Each day 60 hunters are chosen by lot to try their luck under the watchful eye of the ministry of natural resources.

The ministry says the hunt is necessary because the moose have overrun their habitat. There were about 150 moose in the area and, say ministry officials, a hunter's bullet is quicker than starvation next spring.

EXPANDED PORT OUT - OTTAWA

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc is prepared to use toughened federal powers to block any expansion of the Roberts Bank port in British Columbia on the grounds it would threaten salmon spawning grounds.

LeBlanc said in the Commons Tuesday he instructed officials to make this clear during environmental assessment panel hearings on the proposal by the National Harbors Board.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminister) said 300 acres of salmon spawning ground are endangered by the expansion plans "with the potential loss of $60 million in the future."

The harbors board, a federal agency, wants to double the capacity of Roberts Bank, a major coal-exporting centre in the estuary of the Fraser River.

Leggatt said the transport department has balked at telling the assessment panel the projected cost of the expansion.

Environment Minister Len Marchand said he would try to get the cost protection to make sure the panel has all the information needed.

Arctic Airlift Of 1,000 Tons

OTTAWA (CP) — An emergency airlift of essential cargo to Frobisher Bay, N.W.T., later this week will contain about 1,000 tons of supplies, about half those not delivered because of bad weather, a northern affairs official said today.

Some of the Arctic community's 2,400 residents have said they feared the federal government would ship only a token quantity of the 2,000 tons of food, fuel and building supplies expected by ship last month.

The crisis developed after the ship A. C. Crosbie was forced to leave Frobisher Bay because of drifting Arctic ice. Only 1,200 tons had been unloaded and the remaining 2,000 tons went south to Montreal.

The department says the shipment will include personal orders, supplies ordered by small businesses and some material needed by the Northwest Territory Housing Corp. to ensure that construction continues.

Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner has said his department will underwrite costs of the airlift, depending on results of negotiations between Chimo Shipping and the federal government to determine liability for non-delivery of goods.

Knit Mechanic Bar Sticks

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department has decided to bar Sewa Singh Chhina from re-entering Canada from India despite arguments this will force closure of a Stratford, Ont. textile mill.

However, Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said in the announcement today that steps are being taken to train Canadians for Chhina's job to prevent the closing of the Kraven Knitting Ltd. plant as threatened by owner Ken Kraven.

Kraven has said that he would have to close the plant Dec. 22 if the government does not re-admit Chhina, a knitting machine mechanic he considers vital to the mill's operations and virtually irreplaceable. About 50 employees would lose jobs.

Cullen said Chhina "was obviously not a suitable immigrant." He described Chhina as a mechanical trainee who had worked at Kraven for nine months and also worked in Canada illegally under the name of Paul Surinder.

Cullen said 50 Kraven employees have received $38,711 worth of training through the Canada Manpower industrial training program with the latest contract providing training for a knitting machine fixer. That training contract began August 18.

The Employment and Immigration Commission is prepared to consider additional contracts to train knitting mechanics and to ensure that the trainees have sufficient textile experience to benefit from the training, Cullen said. He said the commission also would provide money for a training consultant from the knitting machine manufacturer.

"The machine fixer trainee presently working at Kraven has 12 years textile experience, including certification as a textile technician," he added.

The Canada Employment Centre in Stratford had placed about 60 persons in jobs at Kraven in the last four years and while others were referred there for jobs they "refused the position because of the rate of pay offered or have left when they considered the working conditions unacceptable."

Also, Cullen said Kraven had rejected job applicants, including a machine fixer with 12 years experience and graduates of community college technician programs.

Kraven and a delegation from Stratford city council appealed to Cullen personally about two weeks ago to let Chhina, 26, back in. He was ordered to leave Canada or be deported earlier this year by immigration officials.

Had today's deal arisen in a rubber-bridge game, it would be of little interest, for South had a virtually guaranteed game contract; and the secondary issue would be how many overtricks he would make. But the deal happened to arise in a duplicate game, and the question of how many overtricks South could make became the paramount issue, since the scoring was on a relative basis.

North-South vulnerable. West deals.

NORTH
♠ J 10 8
♡ A Q 10 3

WEST
◇ A Q 8 3 2
♣ Q 6 2

EAST
♠ K Q 9 6 5 2
♣ 10 7 3

SOUTH
♡ K J 7 6 4
◇ K J 10 9 7
♣ K 9

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Dble. | 1 ♠ | 4 ♡ |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | |

Opening lead: Eight of ♡.

When South jumped to four hearts, he was assuming that North, for his takeout double, had support for both of the major suits.

After West had opened a trump and the dummy came into view, it looked as if South would make an overtrick, losing just two tricks to the ace of spades and ace of diamonds. But there was more to the hand than meets the naked eye.

West's opening trump lead was won by dummy's ace, after which a trump was led and taken by South's king. Next came the key play of the deal: South led the nine of diamonds.

As West viewed the set-up, South was going to lose the first diamond trick, after which he intended to trump whatever losing diamonds he still had in his own hand. There was just no doubt in West's mind that East had either the king, jack or ten of diamonds. So East followed suit with the diamond eight, an unusually high card, to let her partner know that West had diamond strength. As can be observed, South's nine won the trick.

Next came the king of diamonds, West covered with the ace and dummy trumped. Then came the king of clubs, the ace of clubs, and a third club which South ruffed as West's queen fell. Now the diamond jack was led, covered by West's queen, and ruffed in dummy. On dummy's jack of clubs, South discarded his singleton spade. Since South's two remaining diamonds were winners, he made all 13 tricks.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"What's Ron's address?" Judy asked. "I know it's Linden Lane, but I always forget the number."

Sam thought a moment. "Maybe this will help you remember," he replied. "If you multiply its two figures you get just two-thirds of his number."

What was it?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: MIMI was 7171 (DIME 4176, even).

MARK TRAIL

Streets of New York: Never Empty or Dull

New York is an exciting city but it also is a city of human debris, the sad shadows of hopelessness against a skyline of wealth and glamor. Here is a report capturing the mood of despair.

By JOHN WARD
Canadian Press

They call them the shopping bag ladies, elderly women who roam the streets, carrying their earthly possessions with them in shapeless, bulging paper sacks.

They are only one element of New York's street people, the homeless, derelict elements with no fixed abode, visible income or any prospects beyond today.

The shopping bag ladies wander the city, shuffling along in ragged, filthy clothing. They are mobile bundles of tatters, their faces dull, seamed with age and grimed with the dirt of the streets.

From time to time, you'll find one on a street corner delivering a high-pitched monologue composed of equal parts of hatred and despair, a bitter harangue against nameless, shadowy oppressors. But they are the exceptions. Most just roam quietly rummaging through trash cans, collecting bits of jetsam, sleeping in doorways or on gratings warmed by escaping sisps of steam from the city's underground heating system.

The city is filled with vagrants of all ages. There are the down-and-outers of the Bowery, scrambling up to cars at stoplights to run a streaky rag over the windshields in hopes of a tip that will go toward a bottle of wine, an anesthetic against today's despair and tomorrow's fear.

The Bowery derelicts are almost exclusively male and almost uniform in their decay. Their faces wear the same blank resignations, their clothes are the same; baggy trousers held with a bit of rope, battered shoes worn through by the streets, shapeless, crusted overcoats hiding threadbare sweaters and frayed work shirts.

Their haunts are doorways in dark streets, vacant lots and air shafts between warehouses. Some even live in abandoned packing crates or makeshift lean-tos.

There are other characters on the streets. Like the filthy, bearded, grey-haired nomad who spends his days drumming out catchy rhythms in the middle of the street at the corner of 50th and Broadway. He flips a pair of drumsticks with a positive flair, tapping out staccatto riffs against the pavement while cars swing around him. He never speaks, doesn't cadge money. He just crouches on the street, playing accompaniment to some unheard music.

Many of the street people are more mercenary, though, like the three-card monte players. Mostly young blacks, they work in trios. One sets up an overturned cardboard box as a playing surface and deals the scam, while his confederates watch for the police.

The object is to find the red ace. The huckster shuffles the cards back and forth, tossing them face down and betting $20 that the passersby can't pick out the red card. The action is accompanied by a stream of fast chatter, as the dealer proves, again and again, that the hand is quicker than the eye.

Stroll the streets of New York and you'll also find wandering musicians playing every kind of music from classical violin pieces to steel drum calypso.

Street magicians will gather small crowds on any corner, passing the hat between tricks.

Times Square is the centre for the corner preachers. They range from taciturn men with sandwich boards calling for repentance to organized groups with microphones and conducted hymns. All this against the background of pornographic movie houses, shifty-eyed drug dealers and the ever-present, eye-batting hookers.

NEW SOLAR HEATER WORKS LIKE BLIND

CHICAGO (AP) — A solar heater that operates like venetian window blinds has been developed by an engineer and her students at the Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT).

The sun's energy is stored in treated salt in the slats of the blind, which reflect heat and light, then warms a room at night.

Dr. Lois Graham, professor of mechanical engineering, and James Stice, a recent IIT graduate, developed the heater with the help of seven students.

British Injuries Halved

LONDON (Reuter) — Seat belts have been found to cut almost in half the number of serious or fatal injuries in highway accidents.

One of the most exhaustive studies ever made of car seatbelts says that if every car driver and passenger in Britain used them, more than 12,000 fatal and serious casualties a year would be prevented, reducing the annual cost of road accidents by about $140 million.

Adrian Hobbs, in a report for the National Transport and Road Research Laboratory, wrote:

"If only 85 per cent wearing rate were achieved, which is a more realistic figure, the potential further saving of 9,000 (deaths and serious injuries) would still be considerable."

Yet despite gruesome billboard and television advertisements here showing women with mutilated faces and teen-aged boys sitting in wheelchairs beside soccer fields—traffic victims who had failed to buckle up—the 1977 wearing rate ranged from 25 per cent in urban areas to 44 per cent on highways.

British cars are required to have seatbelts. But, despite evidence of improved highway safety figures in countries where the wearing of belts is compulsory, Parliament repeatedly has refused to pass such a law, largely due to arguments that the individual has the right to choose his own safety device.

FORD RECALLS '79 RANCHEROS

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. said Tuesday it is recalling 19 of its 1979-model Rancheros with improper wheel labels and 20 Econoline vans and club wagons with possibly defective seat-belts.

A spokesman said the Rancheros have wheels which do not meet government labelling standards, which require raised letters.

The vans and club wagons have optional seat-belts with pivoting mechanisms which may fray or cut the belts if the seats are lowered to serve as beds while the belts are buckled.

About 750 Rancheros and 900 Econoline vans and club wagons are being recalled in the United States for the same reasons, the spokesman said.

Ali Mcgraw Pulled From Car In Real-Life Crash Drama

MALIBU — The cameras should have been rolling from all accounts of the real-life drama that confronted actress Ali MacGraw when her 1978 Mercedes convertible struck a telephone cable dangling above a Pacific coast highway, police said.

Accounts were sketchy about the Saturday accident, but reports say her companion, producer Larry Spangler, pulled her from the badly-damaged auto, and both avoided injury.

Highway Patrol Officer Fred Carpenter said Tuesday that Miss MacGraw's car was the last of five to run into the fallen cable that hung about one metre feet above the ground.

IT'S BEEN HAPPENING on CBC Radio for 10 years now. And Tuesday night the popular program As It Happens really took the cake on its 10th anniversary. Co-hosts Barbara Frum and Alan Maitland examine giant birthday cake. The champagne-bearing filling in the tin hat is Defence Minister Barney Danson.

Erma, Mary Make The Influential List

NEW YORK — Erma Bombeck, writer, and Mary Tyler Moore, actress, are first-timers on the new list of the "25 most influential women in America," in the fourth annual selection conducted by the World Almanac and announced Wednesday.

But missing from last year's list are 12 women including Ella Grasso, who just won re-election as Connecticut governor.

"I'm not sure what happened to Grasso in the balloting," said Jane Flatt, the almanac publisher. "I feel personally that she's truly a woman of influence, a national figure." But Miss Flatt doesn't vote.

Most of the women have appeared on the list before, including Helen Thomas, White House Correspondent for United Press International.

Seven of the newly named 25 have appeared on every list since its inception in 1975.

Publisher Flatt said that in tabulating the ballots from 125 major newspapers who cosponsor the almanac in their communities, the top four in the balloting showed Ann Landers first, Katherine Graham second, Betty Ford third, and Rosalynn Carter fourth.

The almanac's guide for selection defines influential women as "those who, either behind the scenes or in the public eye, influence thoughts and events in America."

The participating newspapers received a suggested list of about 135 prominent names which the staff of the almanac compiled. A ballot and letter were sent to promotion managers or public service directors who were asked to pass along to editors for voting.

Billie Jean King of the tennis world is gone after being chosen for every previous list. The businsss world is without representation.

Bionic Lass Takes Leap Rescue Role

LOS ANGELES — Television's Bionic Woman, actress Lindsay Wagner, took part in a real-life rescue atop a 21-storey hotel as she tried to talk a 27-year-old woman out of jumping to her death, police said today.

A woman identified by police as Pat Lopez of Los Angeles was wrestled to safety Tuesday night by a policeman and the engineer of the Sheraton Universal Hotel in North Hollywood almost an hour after Miss Wagner arrived at the hotel. Ms. Lopez had demanded to speak to the actress, who starred in the recently cancelled television series, police said.

Miss Wagner was picked by a police helicopter at the Malibu sheriff's station helipad at 6:25 p.m., arriving 20 minutes later at the hotel where she talked to Ms. Lopez.

"She (Miss Wagner) was just great," said one policeman, adding that the actress was "instrumental in helping us save the Lopez woman's life."

Despite Miss Wagner's arrival and the rescue efforts of policeman Gordon Stanley and hotel engineer Lee Wyatt, Ms. Lopez refused to climb back onto the roof, Sgt. Jerry Rutherford said.

"We were afraid that she would either get up the courage to jump or just fall out of sheer fatigue," said Rutherford. "She had her toes over the ledge and nearly fell several times."

Police said while Miss Wagner distracted the woman from the rooftop, Wyatt jumped out and grabbed the Lopez woman—nearly carrying both of them over the side.

Stanley then grabbed both Wyatt and the woman, holding them there until other policemen arrived to pull the struggling trio back onto the roof about 7:55 p.m., police said.

Ms. Lopez was admitted to hospital for observation.

Golda Still In Pain

TEL AVIV — The condition of Golda Meir again improved today but a spokesman said she refuses to have visitors because she is "a private person now."

Mrs. Meir's spokesman, Azariah Rappaport, said the 80-year-old grandmother said she still suffered from back and leg pains stemming from a viral infection contracted two months ago.

Rappaport said he could not confirm nor deny a report in the weekly Haolam Hazeh magazine that Mrs. Meir was suffering chronic leukemia.

"I have no knowledge of that because the doctors will not say what is the nature of her disease," Rappaport said.

Rappaport repeatedly emphasized during a telephone interview that Mrs. Meir insists on privacy on grounds she no longer is prime minister. She served in the office from 1969 until 1974.

Big Birthday Bash Today for Charles

LONDON (CP) — Crowds applauded in the streets, hundreds of cards and presents arrived at the palace and there was a special treat at the opera house as Prince Charles marked his 30th birthday Tuesday.

But the real celebration is planned for today at a gala shindig in Buckingham Palace — and the invitation list sparkles with 350 names of the tops of British and jet-set society.

Cards, letters and presents arrived by the hundreds at Buckingham Palace, where Charles has a three-bedroom apartment one floor below the private quarters of his parents, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

As heir apparent, Charles lacks a formal role. The queen is just 52 years old and he may have a long wait before assuming the throne. In the meanwhile, speculating on the identity of his future spouse has become a national pastime.

Hurry Up The Wedding, Dinner's On For Other Hubby. . .

TORONTO (CP) — A 38-year-old woman who left her wedding reception to cook dinner for the man she lived with and later married was given a suspended sentence in county court Tuesday for bigamy.

Judge Frank Callaghan put Jasodra Puran on a year's probation after hearing that she married Charles Gardiner, 81, in 1976, while living with Sieudath Maharaj, whom she married later that year.

Evidence showed that Mrs. Puran married Gardiner after answering his newspaper advertisement for female companionship. He gave her about $6,000 between December, 1976, and January, 1977, although she refused to live with him.

Gardiner asked Mrs. Puran for a divorce when he discovered that she was living with Maharaj and her two-year-old son, but Mrs. Puran married Maharaj without divorcing the senior husband.

A fraud charge was dropped when a provincial court judge ruled at a preliminary hearing that Gardiner could not testify against Mrs. Puran because she was still his wife.

Medzhid Dead. . .at 143

MOSCOW (UPI) — The oldest person in the Soviet Union, a shepherd who became a politician in his later years, has died at age 143, Tass reported Tuesday.

Tass said Medzhid Agayev, who headed a family of 151, died in his native village of Tikyaband high in the mountains of the Trans-Caucasian republic of Azerbaijan.

The Soviet agency did not specify the cause of death.

Agayev took pride in saying that nothing stronger than milk and cold spring water ever passed his lips. He reportedly quit smoking his pipe a year and a half ago.

He was reputed to have been born in 1835, although the absence of complete records in 19th century Azerbaijan has led Western scholars to dispute Transcaucasian claims to extreme longevity.

Agayev, who until three years ago used to walk six miles every day to guard the sheep fields of a local collective farm, acceded to the title of oldest man in the Soviet Union in 1973 with the death of another Trans-Caucasian peasant, Shirali Mislimov, whose age was listed as 168.

The agency said despite three-foot snow drifts, "numerous relatives, friends and acquaintances have come from neighboring villages of the region to bid the last farewell to the centenarian."

Agayev tended sheep for 120 years but gave that up in 1975 when he was elected deputy to represent four mountain villages in a rural Soviet (commune).

Cut Out of Will Ford Son Claims

DETROIT (AP) — Benson Ford Jr., 29-year-old great-grandson of auto pioneer Henry Ford, plans to contest his father's will because, his lawyer says, he "might not even get a penny" of the $100-million estate.

Ford claims the 1975 will does not accurately reflect his father's intentions, and his lawyer William Garrett filed a motion Monday in Probate Court to set aside the Sept. 5 order admitting it to probate.

Benson Ford Sr., a director of the family-controlled No. 2 auto-maker in the United States, died of a heart attack July 27 at the age of 59 while on his yacht.

His will names Benson Ford's widow Edith executrive of the estate and grants her one-half the estate. The other half, after taxes and other specific bequests, would go into two trusts of about $7.5 million each for Benson Ford Jr. and his sister Lynn Ford Alandt of Grosse Pointe.

Bread and potatoes are the good guys

Not All Carbohydrates Deserve the 'Villain' Label

CARBOHYDRATE!

To many people, that is a nasty word. It conjures up images of calories, forbidden foods, and instant pounds.

You probably know many people who feel that bread and potatoes are the prime foods to avoid when you're watching the scales. For many, carbohydrate seems to be the arch-enemy in the fight against overweight.

But wait a moment! The provincial Ministry of Health is now advising us to increase our intake of this so-called "villain".

They feel that we may help to protect ourselves against heart disease and obesity if we cut down on the quantity of fat in our diets, and correspondingly replace it with complex carbohydrate.

Increase our carbohydrate, they say? Hmmm. Does that then give us the go-ahead to eat all the sweets and gooey desserts we've felt guilty about in the past?

No, not quite, but it does mean that we should look towards eating more fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereal products (and yes, that does include bread and potatoes).

There are actually two types of carbohydrates, simple carbohydrate or sugars, and complex carbohydrates, or starch. It is the complex type that should be used to replace some of our dietary fat.

Vegetables and whole grain breads and cereals contain complex carbohydrate. They contribute a host of valuable vitamins and trace minerals along with their carbohydrate.

They are also good sources of fibre or roughage. Some researchers feel that if we increase our dietary fibre, we may possibly decrease our risk of heart disease. More research is needed to confirm this, but increased roughage does make the diet bulkier, and total calories usually fall. This could be a help in your effort to control your weight.

High-roughage diets also help decrease the incidence of constipation and other intestinal disorders, which are common ailments amongst Canadians.

With a few exceptions, foods high in simple carbohydrate should be used only in very limited amounts. They don't yield much in the way of nutrients, providing us mainly with "empty calories."

A high intake of sugar hasn't been proven to increse your risk of heart disease directly, but it does increase the risk of dental disease and obesity, so this is reason enough to keep an eye on your consumption of high-sugar foods.

Fruits are the exception to the above rule. They contain natural sugars, but they also offer a variety of valuable nutrients, as well as tasting great, so go ahead and use them often.

An if you've been denying yourself the delights of a fragrant slice of fresh whole wheat bread or a sumptuous baked potato, remember that these soures of carbohydrate are not "villains." They will benefit your health, so enjoy them.

However, your heart doesn't appreciate overdoses of fat, so go very easy on the butter or sour cream!

Getting out all fine dirt particles is a must before painting or staining furniture and everything else. The paint won't stick well if you don't. The quickest way to do a good cleaning job is with a bike pump. It works when cement needs patching, too.

Save the still-good fingers of an old rubber glove; some day you may hve a bandaged finger that needs to be kept clean and dry while you're potting plants or weeding. A "rubber finger" is also handy when you're applying a super-strength, fast-drying glue.

60-MINUTE GOURMET

More Than Just Color

By PIERRE FRANEY

NEW YORK — For most French chefs, Hungary's greatest contribution to the culinary arts is the use of paprika, an ingredient used in most kitchens to provide a hasty dash of color.

Essentially, however, paprika has a distinct flavor related to that of sweet peppers, and the flavor spectrum ranges from sweet to hot.

Paprika-flavored dishes — often dubbed paprikash — can embrace a lot of territory. The spice can complement a lot of foods, chief among which may be veal, chicken and pork.

In the recipe outlined here, the pork pieces are flattened lightly with a mallet (always an aid in preparing certain foods for hasty cookery) to speed the cooking process.

After the pieces are cooked, chopped onion, paprika and sour cream are used in making the sauce.

An excellent accompaniment for this dish, as it takes a few minutes longer to prepare than the pork, is a ragout of potatoes, a "country stew" with the delicate but obvious flavor of coarsely chopped onions and a touch of garlic.

The total cooking time for the potato dish is approximately half an hour. Prepare this first and then proceed to the pork, providing ample time for preparing the latter.

PORK CUTLETS PAPRIKASH

8 slices boneless loin or tenderloin of pork, about 1¼ lbs.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tsp. sweet or mild paprika
2 tbsp. butter
¼ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup dry white wine
¼ cup fresh or canned chicken broth
½ to ¾ cup sour cream
Finely chopped parsley for garnish

1. Place the meat on a flat surface and pound with a mallet to flatten without breaking the meat.

2. Sprinkle the meat on both sides with salt and pepper to taste.

3. Hold a small sieve over the meat and add the paprika. Tap on the sieve, moving it over the pieces so that they are evenly coated with paprika.

4. Heat the butter in a skillet large enough to hold the meat in one layer. Cook over high heat to brown on one side, about three minutes. Turn and brown on the other side, about three to four minutes.

5. Transfer the pieces to a platter. Pour off the fat from the skillet. To the skillet add the onion. Cook, stirring briefly until wilted. Add the wine and stir to dissolve the brown particles that cling to the bottom and sides of the skillet. Add the chicken broth and simmer about five minutes.

6. Remove the sauce from the heat and stir in the sour cream. The sauce may be spooned over the meat now, but it is preferable to put it through a fine sieve and reheat it briefly before using. After the sauce is spooned over the meat, sprinkle with the parsley and serve.

Yield: Four servings.

POTATO RAGOUT

6 new light-skinned potatoes, about 1½ lbs.
6 to 8 coarsely chopped onions
½ tsp. tomatoe paste
1½ cups fresh or canned chicken broth
1 bay leaf
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Peel the potatoes and cut them into one-inch cubes. Cover with cold water until ready to use.

2. Cut the bacon into crosswise quarter-inch strips.

3. Put the bacon in a saucepan and cook until rendered of fat. When the bacon is crisp, pour off all the fat but leave the bacon in the saucepan.

4. Add the onions and cook briefly, stirring about one minute. Drain the potatoes and add them. Add the garlic and tomato paste. Cook, stirring, until pieces are coated.

5. Add the chicken broth, bay leaf, salt and pepper to taste.

6. Cover and bring to the boil. Simmer 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender.

Yield: Four servings.

'Le Quick Lunch' Hasn't Replaced Artful Eating

LES BAUX, France (AP) — Artful eating is thriving in France despite the presence of franchised hamburgers on the Champs Elysees.

Even along the turnpikes and in the train station, truite aux amandes and chocolate mousse are produced on dinnerware that breaks if dropped. The seediest dives turn out fluffy omelettes and onion soup.

And in the most unlikely places, French masters preside over temples to gastronomy.

Such is Raymond Thuilier, at 81 the doyen of the grand chefs, and seigneur of this Provence village from which bauxite takes its name. His two inns, restored ancient manor houses, nestle in the shadow of an ancient clifftop castle.

He is a total artist, unconcerned about fast food cooks and faddists. Menus at his Custau de Baumaniere bear reproductions of a still life he painted. Meals are served on plates and tablecloths he designed himself. In a white smock and toque, he floats among the tables patting diners on the shoulder, arranging flowers in copper tubs and making sure his waiters keep their chins erect. His exotic birds sing in the garden he landscaped. And he is even mayor.

French cooks are good, the best ones say, because they work hard, select ingredients carefully and pay close attention to detail. When they add imagination, they are often great.

Thuilier says: "A good chef is a good executor. A grand chef is a creator." He earned his third Michelin Guide star in 1954. He sold insurance until he was 50 but insists he was born to the skillet — his mother ran two railway station restaurants.

Thuilier, echoing sentiments expressed by his colleagues, says haute cousine is flourishing despite trends toward mass production, rising costs and the popularity of le quick lunch.

"Cooking is not static, it changes constantly with the times, and always keeping its traditional bases. One speaks of the 'new couisine' which serves, for example, warm eel pate. That dish was served first to Henry XIII.

"There are some very promising young chefs coming up," he added. At Baumaniere, he is grooming his 33-year-old grandson, Jean-Anore Cariel, as successor.

If anything, say Thuilier and other grand chefs, modern times have improved fine cooking.

Thuilier, beaming with pride, shows visitors the gadgetry in his kitchen. "Look at that — the salamander. We can brown the outside of a saddle of lamb without cooking it. Look at these pastry counters, each refrigerated separately for different types of crusts. And these drawers, all cooled ... and this stove."

Chefs often must bankroll special suppliers to be sure their chickens are tender and cheeses are aged properly. But menu planning has been revolutionized. Out of season, 10 charter flights leave Kenya daily with green beans for French kitchens. Britanny oysters are sped to Southern France. The truffle has been domesticated.

Fine food, even in modest places, is seldom cheap. A Thuilier meal — or its equvalent elsewhere in France — can run to $70 a person with moderately priced wines. But Baumaniere serves 40,000 people a year and turns away almost as many. Especially in Paris, the best restaurants are often booked up weeks in advance.

Many tourists are lured by reputations and willing to pay any price, but most diners in any great restaurant are Frenchmen who prefer eating well to almost anything else. French families spend 26 per cent of their income on food, a study has shown.

"You must understand," said one young professional, sipping mineral water after a five-course lunch. "With us, eating is a ritual."

The bible on restaurants here is Michelin's Red Guide, which lists 3,447 restaurants, giving 18 of them a three-star rating. Some time ago, a French chef shot himself when he lost a star.

Brunch Pleases Everyone

cooking with kay

Breakfasts on weekends, when you have company, can be a little chaotic. If you're not sure what time your family and guests will be up, plan on serving brunch. I do regularly and it seems to please everyone.

Pacify early-risers with bowls of succulent fruit, jugs of ice-cold juice and pots of freshly brewed coffee set out on a serve-yourself tray. Then plan to have Meal Number One ready before midday. After noon, I feel brunch becomes lunch.

One of the easiest ways to fix eggs is to bake them in the oven in bread cups. They don't have to be watched constantly. Tomato halves sprinkled lightly with sweet basil (preferably chopped fresh) and baked for only five minutes make perfect companions for the egg cups. Also, a few oven-baked sausages can be served if you wish.

BRUNCH FOR SIX:
Basket of Fresh Fruit
Cold Juice
Egg Cups with Cheese Sauce
Baked Tomatoes
Sausages
Blueberry Muffins

Egg Cups with Sauce
6 slices brown bread
Soft butter
6 eggs

Cheese Sauce:
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 cup shredded Edam, Gouda or medium Cheddar cheese
½ teaspoon mustard (hot, prepared)
Pinch of paprika
2 slices side bacon, crisply cooked and crumbled.

Trim crusts from bread and flatten with rolling pin. Butter both sides and then gently fit into muffin cups. Break eggs into each bread cup. Top each with a sma dab of butter. Bake at 350° F. for 20 minutes. To make sauce melt butter in small saucepan. Blend in flour, salt, mustard and paprika. Gradually stir in milk.

Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat until mixture is smooth and comes to a boil. Remove from heat, add cheese and stir until cheese melts. Place egg cups on serving plates (warm), pour over hot cheese sauce and sprinkle with crumbled bacon.

Tastier Rice Pudding With Apricot Topping

1 cup uncooked rice
1 cup water
3½ cups milk
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
2 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
⅓ cup seedless raisins
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1½ cups buttered bread crumbs

Combine rice and water; cook, covered, 5 minutes. Stir in 3 cups milk, butter, salt, and ⅓ cup sugar.

Bring to boil, reduce the heat, cover and cook about 30 minutes or until rice is soft and creamy, stirring frequently.

Blend ½ cup milk and eggs; stir into pudding. Add lemon peel, raisins, and vanilla. Combine bread crumbs with remaining sugar and toss lightly.

Spoon into serving dishes and top with cooked or canned apricot halves or other fruit, if desired.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Recipes to Convert Those Liver Haters!

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

Nutritionally speaking, liver counts among the most important foods in our diets. It contains many vitamins and minerals, lots of protein and very little fat. It also happens to be one of the less expensive cuts of meat.

For example, here is a comparison of some nutrients in a 3-oz. (85 g.) serving of broiled regular ground beef and of a similar serving of fried beef liver:

| | Ground Beef | Beef Liver |
|---|---|---|
| Calories | 245 | 45.000 |
| Protein (g) | 21 | 23 |
| Fat (g) | 17 | 9 |
| Iron (mg) | 2.7 | 7.5 |
| Vitamin A (i.u.) | 30 | 45.000 |
| Thiamin (mg)) | 0.07 | 0.23 |
| Riboflavin (mg) | 0.18 | 3.50 |
| Niacin (mg) | 4.6 | 14.0 |

It is because of the superior nutritional value of liver that many nutritionists emphasize the importance of including it in diets and menu plans. So, in a previous column, we asked our readers to share with us any recipes that they may have tried and with which they might have succeeded in getting their families to eat more liver.

They came from every corner of the country . . . favorite recipes for liver. Some were remarkably similar, while others were original and seem quite delicious. We have not tried every one, but include some that promise to be tasty. For instance, from Toronto:

LIVER ORIENTAL

Use ¼ lb. of liver for each person and cut into thin strips, about one inch long. Saute in a little vegetable oil (½ tbsp. for ¼ lb.).

Add half an onion per person and sliced mushrooms (be generous). Season with a little garlic powder, pepper and two shakes of tobasco sauce.

Once the liver is browned and everything is simmering nicely, add about ¼ cup of white wine and a bouillon cube (judge for yourself if you are preparing this for one serving). Cover the pan and simmer for about five minutes. Thicken with cornstarch or flour.

Serve with rice or noodles and a dollop of yogurt over the top. The tobasco and pepper makes it spicy; the yogurt cools the flavor down.

We had similar recipes from several people. Some had variations such as minced green pepper or thinly sliced carrots and zucchini to go with the onion to saute. A suggestion from the chef: Why not coat the liver with cornstarch at the beginning? This avoids the thickening at the end which can be a hit-and-miss affair if you're an inexperienced cook.

Here's a Spanish variation:

HIGADO CON PESTO

3 thin fillets of liver; make certain that they are sliced of even thickness
2 tbsp. oil

Cook with the lid on for no more than eight minutes. Serve with "pesto" on top.

Pesto ingredients:

½ cup freshly chopped parsley
3 cloves garlic, chopped
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. thyme

Mix all ingredients. Add a little oil if desired.

BAKED LIVER AND ONIONS

Flour
Pinch of paprika
Salt and pepper
1 medium onion, chopped
2 stalks celery, chopped
Garlic powder

Preheat oven to 375° F.

Cut liver into pieces about two inches square. Put flour, seasoned with paprika, salt and pepper into a plastic bag. Add liver, a few pieces at a time and shake the bag to coat each piece well.

Arrange liver in the pan in a single layer. Sprinkle very lightly with garlic powder. Cover evenly with the chopped onions and celery. Seal foil and cook in preheated oven for 15 minutes. Uncover and continue cooking until heated through. Serve with tomatoes.

Makes two servings.

Without exception, our readers expressed the opinion that their families had been liver haters before they used these recipes. Hurrah for new converts!

And thank you, dear readers, for taking the time to share your recipes.

ONION QUICHE

Cheese lovers come in all shapes and sizes and so do the cheeses they enjoy. But, with current concerns on food prices, Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada offers a few money-saving tips on cheese buying.

Start by comparing prices of bulk cheese versus similar pre-packaged or sliced cheese. Compare prices of Canadian-made cheeses with imported types. Use mild or medium instead of old cheese in most recipes. Flavor your own creamed cheese by adding spices, herbs, chopped olives, pimento or bacon bits. Grate cheese that has become hard and use it in cooking or baking.

For an inexpensive meal idea, serve this Onion Quiche. It costs only 19 cents per serving and cheese is one of its main ingredients. Combined with the eggs it is an excellent source of protein.

15 ml. flour
1 baked 23 cm. pie shell
300 ml. sliced, halved onion
25 ml. fat
3 beaten eggs
175 ml. water
50 ml. skim milk powder
2 ml. salt
0.5 ml. pepper
25 ml. grated medium cheddar cheese

Mix 175 ml. cheese with flour and sprinkle on bottom of baked pie shell. Saute onion in fat until transparent. Spread onion over cheese mixture. Combine eggs, water, skim milk powder and seasonings. Pour into pie shell. Top with 25 ml. cheese. Bake at 180° C. until custard sets (about 30 min.). Six servings.

How to Make Good Use of Halloween Pumpkins

Just about now you may be wondering what can be done with pumpkin left over, you might say, from Halloween. One good thing about this vegetable monstrosity is that no matter how big a specimen you have, it can be used over a long period if the cut surface is covered with plio-film or heavy waxed paper and the fruit is kept in a cool temperature, not necessarily in refrigerator but in a similar temperature. The seeds and stringy parts must be scraped out.

If we can judge by the mounds of pumpkins displayed at vegetable outlets on the weekend preceding Halloween, every household in Greater Victoria must now be confronted with the problem of using this usually vast fruit, for fruit it is.

Pumpkin pie is one idea that occurs to most, yet this is not a favorite food which can be often served. The heavy spicing and sugaring leaves no flavor of pumpkin nor many of its nutrients available.

Nutrients are not lacking in pumpkin when cooked in a simple way as are mature winter squash such as Hubbard. There is indeed a resemblance between the two. A favorite recipe already on hand may give you ideas for using pumpkin.

According to a booklet published only a few years ago, (no date recorded) by B.C. Hydro Home Service Centre, and no longer available, mature pumpkin having dry pulp can be successfully frozen and then can be used as a vegetable by reheating over low heat, or for pies if first thawed and used in the same way a you do fresh or canned pumpkin. Stored in freezer at 0 deg. F. or minus 18 deg. C, pumpkin may be kept for 9 to 12 months.

BAKED PUMPKIN CASSEROLE

3 cups cooked and mashed pumpkin
3 small garlic cloves whole OR
1 Tbsp chopped chives
3 small eggs
¼ cup milk from skim milk powder
2 Tbsp wholewheat flour
½ tsp baking powder
½ tsp salt
½ cup wholewheat bread-crumbs
1 Tbsp wheat germ
2 Tbsp soft margarine, melted

Estimate quantitiy of pumpkin to take in chunks; scrape out stringy portion, and seeds which may be kept and dried for eating. Sprinkle pieces lightly with salt; place cut side down in steamer or in saucepan.

Add boiling water to less than an inch in pan, add the whole garlic cloves in the water. Cover and cook until pumpkin is fork tender, 15 to 20 minutes according to age of pumpkin. Drain well, keeping liquid for soups or other uses. Discard whole garlic cloves.

Bake in fairly hot oven 190 deg. C for 25 to 30 minutes or until slightly risen and browned.

Serve with green peas or green beans to increase protein and vitamin C of the pumpkin. Minerals will be well represented in this meal to serve 4 to 5.

Baked Pumpkin pieces take a few minutes less to prepare, though it is actual splitting of the first piece that is difficult. Sometimes a small bladed clean axe is the best instrument to make the first cut.

It is much safer to prepare a few chunks of pumpkin when not in a hurry about a meal. Pack the pieces, cleaned out, in a large plastic bag with a tie to keep out air. Store in vegetable bin of refrigerator for two to three days.

hilda beastall

STUFFED BAKED PUMPKIN

4 suitably shaped chunks pumpkin
½ cup ground raw peanuts
1 tsp finely chopped onion
1 Tbsp finely chopped parsley (or kale)
1 medium red or green tomato few grains salt
¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese

Scrape out seeds and stringy fiber of pumpkin to form a well in each piece. Mix all ingredients except cheese, adding wholewheat breadcrumbs if needed to increase amount.

Spoon into centre of each piece. Place the pieces in a shallow glass baking dish adding near boiling water to half way up sides of pieces.

Put into fairly hot 219 deg. C until water bubbles; reduce heat to moderate 177 deg. C until fork tender, about 20 minutes.

Now for a Pumpkin Bread recipe which may have other vegetable such a smashed carrots or squash substituted or added to the cooked mashed pumpkin.

PUMPKIN BREAD OR ROLLS

¼ cup warm water
1 Tbsp baker's yeast or 1 pkt.
1 tsp sugar
3 Tbsp soft margarine
½ tsp salt
¼ cup brown sugar
⅔ cup hot water
1 cup cooked mashed pumpkin
¼ cup skim milk powder
2 cups wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
1 Tbsp wheat bran
¾ to 1 cup wholewheat and unbleached flour

Pour warm water into warm mixing bowl. Mix in 1 tsp sugar. Sprinkle yeast on surface. Leave in warm place 10 minutes to dissolve.

In small bowl, measure margarine, salt, sugar, milk powder and cooked pumpkin. Pour hot water over all to mix and melt margarine.

Add pumpkin mixture to yeast mixture. Beat in 2 cups flour, with wheat germ and bran. Beat well with wooden spoon until smooth.

Beat in and stir enough of remaining flours to make a safe, smooth elastic dough.

Take off pieces to fit greased and floured large muffin pans, four-inch foil pans, or two small loaf pans or one 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Smooth up a little.

Put at once into cold oven. Turn heat to about 95 deg. F (35C) for 10 minutes. Turn heat off until dough has risen to near edge of pans. Now turn heat up to fairly hot 400 deg. F (204 C) to slow the rising and start cooking.

After 10 minutes turn down to moderate 350° F (177 C) for about 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

Smaller buns and muffin pans take about 15 minutes, large loaf about 25 minutes. The large loaf may need loose foil over to prevent scorching.

This is a lovely light textured bread for lunches in brown bags or in school lunch boxes or at home. Split or slice and lightly spread with margarine and a thin slice of cheddar cheese, or with peanut butter, yogurt and grated carrots.

RICE-APPLE CRISP

2 cups cooked rice
1 can (20 ounces) pie-sliced apples
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup flour
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup chopped nut meats

Combine rice, apples, lemon juice, ½ cup sugar, cinnamon and salt in buttered shallow baking dish. Mix flour and remaining sugar. Cut in butter until mixture is crumbly. Stir in nut meats. Sprinkle over rice-apple mixture. Bake at 350° for 30 minutes. Serve warm topped with whipped cream. Makes six servings.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Tell SYLVIA, who's looking for a chastity belt, not to be stupid.

The use of the chastity belt caused much suffering among women in medieval times.

The constant chafing of the metal against the legs caused blisters, scars and gangrenous infections. Not to mention the weight of the belt, which caused chronic backaches and serious spinal deformities.

Hopefully, we've come a long way since then. But, Abby, what would happen if the husband lost the key? — CONCERNED FEMINIST.

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly what SYLVIA is going through. She's the wife who's trying to find a chastity belt so she can put her husband's suspicions to rest.

I've been married for 14 years to a wonderful man whose only fault was his unreasonable jealousy. He loved me dearly,. and although I've always been a true and faithful wife, he never trusted me out of his sight.

The daily accusations, denials and fighting were destroying our marriage, so together we designed something on the order of a chastity belt.

It's a tight-fitting, rubber, panty girdle over which I wear an old-fashioned type corset which laces up the bak. My husband laces me into it every morning, tying the lace in a hard knot at the top where I can't reach it, let alone undo it. Over that I wear a snug-fitting wide leather belt which also fastens in the back with a small padlock like those used on suitases. My husband carries the only key.

Every day he comes home at noon to help me in the bathroom.

This may sound like a humiliating solution, and I'm certainly not advocating it for all wives, but it saved our marriage. — HAPPY.

DEAR HAPPY: If you're happy in this kind of wedlock, more power to you.

DEAR ABBY: We do custom work in metal. We make swords and military items for museums and personal collections. Having made armor for living history programs, the chastity belt should be no problem at all.

Of course, it would require some redesigning, since the chastity belt was notoriously uncomfortable for the wearer. We would also need the exact measurements to provide a proper fit.

And I add, Abby, after a hard day in the shop, I look forward to your column, as it adds a little fun and a great deal of insight into human problems.— J. LUTHER SOWERS.

Non-Smoker All Choked Up

In a recent column, you pointed out that smoke emitted from a cigarette, cigar, or pipe indoors is harmful to the health of non-smokers in the room. In view of this, why in the world do some physicians still permit smoking in their waiting rooms? I went to one the other day and found that all of us helpless patients were forced to breathe toxic fumes against our will during our wait for the doctor. Even the receptionist was smoking. Don't you think this is shocking? — Mr. M. D.

Dear Mr. D.:

Your own initials, "M.D.," are deserved because of your keen understanding of a problem that really must be solved. Non-smokers everywhere who are caught in closed, confined areas and made captive victims of another person's smoke must band together to battle such an injustice.

You are correct in believing that injury can be done to you by such lack of consideration. Although you are not in a position to make people stop smoking, you can gently suggest to the receptionist and the doctor that it is an intolerable situation whih should be altered.

Anyone with a heart, vascular, or lung problem sitting in a doctor's office in a state of anxiety should not have the added burden of inhaling unpleasant fumes. Most doctors have signs in their offices asking poeple not to smoke. Those who violate this request should be gently made aware of it. Almost always, people react to a kind, non-angry suggestion.

How often have you sat down in a restaurant and just begun your dinner when your neighbor, having compoeted his meal, lights up a heavy cigar? It isn't quite fair is it? Yet it happens. Now legislation in many states forbids anyone to smoke in confined areas.

your health

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I have a fallen womb. The doctor thinks it could be responsible for my fatigue and suggested I have an operation. Do you think surgery would help? — Mrs. N. C. F.

Dear Mrs. F.:

The ligaments that support the uterus, or womb, sometimes are stretched in women who have given birth to one or more children. The womb may fall from its normal position. This is known as a prolapse.

Associated with a fallen womb is a sense of heaviness, discomfort, and fatigue especially at the end of a busy day. Pressure by the fallen womb may press on the bladder and cause urinary problems. It may also put pressure on the rectum and cause annoying symptoms.

When surgery is clearly indicated, it is usually remarkably effective in tightening and strengthening the muscles that have lost their tone and no longer support the womb. Whether or not the fatigue is entirely caused by the fallen womb must be carefully evaluated before an operation is undertaken.

CHEAPER BUT NOT AS GOOD

TORONTO (CP) — Supermarkets' frozen versions of fast foods are generally cheaper but not as good as the foods sold by the fast-food outlets, a survey shows.

Seven testers reported that take-out pizzas varied in quality, but were more expensive than frozen ones, which averaged about $2.59 for a 12-inch pie. The two fast-food chains tested charged $4.70 and $5.40 for the same size pizza.

The testers said frozen fried chicken was far inferior to take-out chicken, although it costs the same. They said this probably explains why frozen fried chicken has not sold as well as frozen pizza.

Bio-dex

Nov. 16/78 By Ken J. Michaels

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- Your signature is requested, but have you read the fine print? A moment of caution is advised.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Was that a nightmare last night or a secret revelation? Only your subconscious knows the secrets you hide. Heed the call.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Go! Go! Go! Your personal sun is shining and everyone basks in its glow. Be the leader and surprise the world!

A couple of weeks ago I suggested that a computer could not compete with a human brain. One of my readers disagreed and talked about a massive new computer that will "out-think" us. I'll believe it when I see it. My Bio-dex charts are produced by a big computer, but a lot of human brain-power went into the program. Anyway, if the computer is all that smart, how come I have to write this column? The big electronic box can't come up with a good idea, no matter how high its Bio-dex.

Chicken Fried Steak

2 pounds of cubed steak, or round steak
Salt and pepper
2 eggs beaten with
1 tablespoon water
Fine cracker crumbs or bread crumbs
Oil for frying
2 cups canned chicken broth or bouillon
1 can mushroom pieces if desired

If you use round steak, trim it and pound it well before cutting into serving size pieces, about 3 inches square. Salt and pepper each. Dip steak pieces in beaten egg then in fine crumbs, coating well. Fry in hot oil to brown only lightly.

When all meat is browned, layer in roasting pan with tight fitting lid. Add mushroom pieces, thin onion slices or any favorite flavoring, such as pinch garlic salt or seasoning salt. Have chicken broth hot before adding to pan.

Cover tightly and bake at 350 degrees for about one hour or till steaks are fork tender. Remove lid and allow to bake until juice is all but absorbed.

'If I Go Down, You're Going Down With Me'

TORONTO (CP) — Quebec businessman Jean Simard testified Tuesday that prosecution witness Horace Grant Rindress threatened to "bring Simard down" if Rindress was fired as president of J. P. Porter Co. Ltd.

Simard was testifying at the dredging fraud conspiracy trial of 11 men and nine companies charged with defrauding public agencies of $4,279,000 by rigging bids on dredging contracts. Simard, a former director of Porter, is one of the men charged.

Simard said Rindress made the statement Dec. 23, 1973, during a meeting in Miami, Fla. Rindress went to Florida to confer with Simard, whose family then owned Porter and the Richelieu Dredging Corp., after the RCMP raided Porter's Montreal headquarters to obtain information on bid-rigging.

Bruno Desjardins, then a Porter director, tried to fire Rindress following the RCMP raids, the Ontario Supreme Court jury has heard.

Simard, 56, said Rindress seemed to undergo a personality change during the meeting.

At first, Rindress was nervous, pale, excited and upset, Simard said.

Simard quoted Rindress as saying: "I'm going to co-operate and I'll come out clean in this investigation."

Simard said he assured Rindress no decision would be taken about Rindress's future with the company until other members of the Simard family had been consulted.

"Rindress stood up, he changed completely, his face changed completely," Simard testified. "He said 'Now if you fire me . . . I will open a big can of worms and bring you right down with me . . .'. It was as though he had two personalities, two consciences.

"He said, 'If I go down, you're going down with me,'" Simard testified.

AIRPORT TERMINAL FOR OLD CROW

WHITEHORSE (CP) — Old Crow, a tiny log cabin Indian community in the northern Yukon, is getting its first airport terminal.

The 90-square-metre building will be constructed of logs hewn, peeled and carved by workers at the village co-operative store, Bill Almoky, Transport Canada regional manager, said in an interview Tuesday. He expected the building to be ready in about two weeks.

Old Crow, roughly 1,300 kilometres north of here, has a gravel airstrip but arriving visitors always have had to walk a short trail from there to the village before finding shelter. There are no roads into the community from the outside.

Bids in on Nfld. Refinery

By AL COLLETTI
Canadian Press

The bitter battle between former owner John Shaheen and challenger Roger Tamraz for financial control of the valuable but inactive oil refinery at Come By Chance, Nfld., is in full swing.

Officially, Shaheen and Tamraz, chairman of the Luxembourg-based First Arabian Corp. SA, have kept mum for weeks about their offers for the bankrupt refinery, closed since the end of 1975.

But details of their proposals have been leaked from various sources in St. John's, Nfld., New York, London, Toronto, Chicago and Paris during the last six weeks.

Peat Marwick Ltd. of Toronto, receiver and manager of the 100,000-barrel-a-day refinery, has bids from Shaheen and Tamraz.

Information from several sources give some idea of the scope of the bids. Shaheen's seems to be clearer in the actual payout of funds for repairing the refinery and payment to unsecured creditors.

Shaheen, president of Shaheen Natural Resources Co., is based in New York. He developed the refinery, which opened in late 1973, but it never reached its potential because of technical problems. It could not distil enough gasoline and jet fuel to make it pay.

The first Arabian bid was submitted to Peat Marwick about six weeks ago. Shaheen's more recently. Both are contending for a refinery that cost $216 million to build.

Its replacement cost in 1978 dollars is at least twice the original investment.

It was learned that First Arabian's proposal totals about $174 million to be paid over a longer period than Shaheen's.

One source gave a ballpark figure of $190 million for the Shaheen package.

While it doesn't go into detail about construction and repairs, First Arabian expects the cost of taking the refinery out of mothballs and repairing it for start-up will exceed $30 million.

Hijackers Fail

GENEVA (AP) — There were 29 attempted aircraft hijackings in 1977, the largest number since 1972, but only four were successful, the International Air Transport Association reports. IATA said hijackers can only be deterred by the elimination of safe-haven airports at which they will not be arrested.

BACK SURGERY BAD FOR MOST

TORONTO (CP) — About 90 per cent of patients who have had four or more back operations are in worse condition after the surgery, says a study by the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board.

Dr. William McCracken, medical services director for the board, told officials at the 20th anniversary of the board's hospital and rehabilitation centre that only 10 per cent of patients improve after four back operations as opposed to 20 per cent after two.

Dr. McCracken said that although nine out of 10 people suffer back problems at some time, only brain injuries are less understood.

The board, which handled 50,000 back injuries in 1977, is developing criteria to help doctors decide when to perform back operations.

Dr. McCracken said that only about five per cent of back injuries keep workers from their jobs for more than three months.

Phoney Rank Nets $28,131

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Gervais obtained an officer's commission from the Alabama militia last year and then made $28,131 for a war veteran's association he founded, the Quebec inquiry into organized crime was told Tuesday.

Gervais, known as "Colonel Saunders" to his friends, testified that he obtained a document giving him the rank of a lieutenant-colonel aide-de-camp simply by requesting it from the Alabama government.

The only veteran's qualification he had was a few months service in the Canadian Armed Forces near the end of the Second World War.

Gervais, bearded and carrying a cane, testified that he established the Montreal War Veterans' Association in 1977, and, with a publicity company called Milo Publications Inc., launched a public financing campaign by selling all-purpose detergent. The sale of the detergent brought in $28,131.

Gervais admitted that his association had less than 30 members, including a 22-year-old man.

Tony Giarrusso, a Montreal Urban Community policeman, told the crime inquiry that a police investigation found that virtually anyone can obtain a similar document from the Alabama militia. He added that he received one by phoning a colleague in Montgomery.

Gervais currently works for Toronto-based Belmont Advertising House, a company that made $356,858 by selling advertising for charitable causes in 1977, according to testimony heard earlier before the police commission inquiry.

'Fair' Firing if Retirement Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Life Insurance Association said Tuesday that employers must have some fair way to get rid of aging, unproductive workers if the government bans mandatory retirement at age 65.

The association, representing 127 of 169 life insurance companies in Canada, also said the costs of group life insurance and health insurance plans would increase.

And it said benefits for accidental death and dismemberment might become a thing of the past.

"Not only would costs rise appreciably, but it might be difficult to assess whether or not death occurred by accident for elderly persons," the association said.

The statements were made in a brief at the opening of hearings by members of a special Senate committee on retirement age policies.

While the insurance association said it would not oppose any ban on mandatory retirement, the department of national defence said its employees should be totally exempt from any moves to lift the retirement age to 70 or to eliminate all age barriers to work.

The defence department, which has compulsory retirement for some personnel at age 50, said in a brief that military work requires energy, strength and endurance.

"A military force must have the means to release those who are no longer able to contribute at the extreme limits of human physical and mental performance and to replace them with fresh young men and women," the department said.

The insurance companies also said that social security benefits available now to persons 65 and older should be based on a means test if the elderly are allowed to work.

These would include the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans, Old Age Security, Unemployment Insurance, certain income tax deductions, provincial health benefits and other social programs.

The insurance brief contained an examination of both sides of the issue but expressed clear concern about the employers' ability to retire an aging person once he or she was considered unproductive.

"The employer simply must deal with the individual whose productivity has slipped . . . in connection with aging," association president David Pretty, of Toronto, said under questioning.

The brief cited as an argument in favor of age 65 retirement the prospect of employees appealing to courts or human rights commissions if they are not permitted to work beyond that age.

"Companies might be required to make extensive and costly documentation of all company decisions," the brief said.

On the other hand, the association said that forcing some productive workers to retire at 65 "cuts back unnecessarily on the employer's returns realizable from his investment in human resources."

Pretty said insurance companies would not argue against a ban on mandatory retirement as long as social security programs were changed and sufficient time given for changing private benefit plans formulas.

It said practical problems would have to be worked out for pension plans — based on retirement age assumptions — and for disability benefits which should be co-ordinated with retirement pension dates.

And if gradual retirements were permitted, gradually increasing pension benefits should be paid while salary is scaled down, the association said.

Rookie Woman Mountie Slow to Get Her Man

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — RCMP Constable Candace Smith testified Tuesday she could not bring herself to shoot a man during a gun battle in Virden, Man., last Jan. 23, even though the man had a shotgun and she knew her life depended on it.

Ms. Smith was testifying at the trial of Herbert Bruce Archer, 42, and Dorothy Lillian Archer, 29, who have pleaded not guilty to charges of first degree murder in connection with the death of 27-year-old RCMP Constable Dennis Onofrey.

Ms. Smith, 24, had finished her basic training just six weeks before the incident.

She said she and Constable John O'Ray, 28, arrived at Room 20 of the Countryside Inn Motel in Virden, 70 kilometres west of here, after Cpl. Russell Hornseth and Onofrey approached the door of the room.

She saw a flash of fire and heard a gunshot, then ran for cover and pulled out her gun.

"I hesitated . . . I knew I would have to shoot him . . . and I would probably only get one chance."

MEDICS TO AID TORTURED

OTTAWA (CP) — Physician Philip Berger is trying to mobilize the medical community to help refugees in Canada who were physically or mentally tortured by authorities in their native countries.

In an interview Tuesday he told of examining South American refugees in Toronto with body scars from electrical shocks and cigarette burns, with broken bones from beatings, with nightmares and sickness caused by memories of public executions, continuous rape and imprisonment.

In a quiet campaign, waged through Amnesty International, medical publications Berger is trying to set up a network of doctors across the country.

Ottawa to Carry PetroCan

'SOCIALISTIC' GRITS BLAMED

OTTAWA (CP) — The "socialist" leanings of the Liberal government are to blame for the country's ailing economy, Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens told the Commons Tuesday.

"This government, though Liberal in name, is essentially socialist in nature," Stevens said. It is backed by the New Democratic Party, which "is not socialist in name but is socialist in reality."

He said the NDP supported Prime Minister Trudeau's minority government in power from 1972 to 1974.

The result was "an expansion in our monetary system and fiscal system that gave us the inflation we now are living with, gave us our high interest rates and caused the lack of real growth."

Partnership between the socialist NDP and "emperor" Trudeau "has ravished this country."

The free-enterprise concept was invented 200 years ago in England; then, "fuelled by the individual dreams of millions grants."

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal treasury is ultimately responsible for any debt incurred by Petro-Canada in borrowings to take over Pacific Petroleums Ltd., Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

Gillespie, under fire in the Commons from Progressive Conservative MPs who say he misled them, told the Commons he still feels the deal is a straight commercial venture with no requirement for special government guarantees.

But he agreed that since Petro-Canada is an agent of the Crown, the government would be responsible if Petro-Canada did not make good on repayments of borrowed money.

Gillespie, in answering questions from former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield and other Conservatives Monday, said there are no government guarantees.

His comments Tuesday came as he answered a question of privilege raised by Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) who said answers to opposition questions Monday impaired his ability to work as an MP.

"I took his (Gillespie's) words yesterday at face value," Stanfield told the Commons. But now the answer seemed to have changed.

As part of a question to Gillespie Monday, Stanfield asked whether "there is absolutely no financial responsibility on the part of the federal government?"

Gillespie said outside the House that he did not choose to answer that portion of the Stanfield question. He dealt only with whether there was an express guarantee.

It was a trick of the opposition to bundle a series of questions together in hopes of tripping up the government, Gillespie said. It also was tradition for a minister to draw out only one of the questions for a reply.

Of course the government ultimately is responsible, the minister said. But that was provided for in the Financial Administration Act and he felt no need to explain the act to Stanfield.

It was the second day in a row that the Conservatives have pressed the government on Petro-Canada's move to swallow up the United States-controlled Pacific Petroleum.

The government company already has agreed to purchase the 48 per cent of Pacific shares held by Phillips Petroleum Co.

PROTEST OVER UIC CLAMPS

OTTAWA (CP) — Student unions across the country have sent Employment Minister Bud Cullen telegrams protesting the proposed tightening of the unemployment insurance program.

"Policy implications doom Atlantic students," says one from student at Mount St. Vincent University in Halifax.

It was one of 27 copies of telegrams released Tuesday by the National Union of Students (NUS) with a statement saying the proposals will deny benefits to thousands of young people while they seek jobs "in a now saturated labor market."

The bill was approved in principle by the Commons last week and has now gone to committee for clause-by-clause approval.

PQ's Efforts On Economy Weak: Poll

MONTREAL (CP) — The Parti Quebecois government gets good marks on social issues but poor marks for economic performance from people surveyed in a poll published in La Presse today, the PQ's second anniversary in office.

The poll suggests that 51 per cent of the population is generally pleased with the PQ government's record, but 45 per cent are dissatisfied. The remaining four per cent did not answer either way.

The telephone poll of 856 people was conducted between Oct. 18 and 27 for La Presse by the Centre de Recherches en Opinion Publique, a professional polling agency.

People in Montreal and elsewhere in the province felt roughly the same about the government's performance. But while 54 per cent of French-speaking respondents said they were satisfied with the government, only 35 per cent of anglophones said the same.

The PQ's highest score in the province-wide survey came in consumer protection, with 66 per cent satisfied with the government's performance and 24 per cent unhappy.

The government's performance on the sensitive language issue won the approval of 57 per cent, but it was here that the language split was most evident: 64 per cent of francophones said they were happy, but on the English-speaking side of the fence, only 24 per cent expressed approval.

Economic matters are not regarded as the PQ's strong point, the poll indicated. Only 28 per cent said they were satisfied with the government's general economic performance, and 62 per cent showed unhappiness — including 74 per cent of anglophones.

In job creation, the PQ was panned by 69 per cent of respondents, with only 22 per cent expressing satisfaction.

Labor relations drew government support from 38 per cent of respondents with 44 per cent unhappy with its approach. Eighteen per cent expressed no view.

In another way of looking at how the government is regarded, the poll found that 33 per cent of francophones feel the general state of Quebec society has improved since the PQ election win, 22 per cent say things have got worse and 39 per cent say they have remained about the same.

But Quebec's English-speaking minority is far more pessimistic. Sixty-eight per cent said things have become worse, 17 per cent saw little change and only seven per cent saw improvement.

The poll is the first of a series of four. La Presse says it will publish voters' views on Ottawa's performance, federal-provincial relations and the independence referendum later this week.

La Presse provided a comparison with earlier polls showing the Parti Quebecois's early support dropping off in late 1977 and early 1978 but rising in recent months.

The highest rates of satisfaction are found among unionized workers, students and the young generally. Those most unhappy are non-French-speaking respondents, people over 45 and those with little education.

Thirty-five per cent of those polled said the present government is more favorable toward workers than the previous Liberal government, 10 per cent said the PQ is less favorable and 41 per cent said there is little change.

Federal Gov't Just a Signee?

Prison Report Shelved?

OTTAWA (CP) — What happened to that landmark 1976 report on federal prison reform?

This was among the first questions on the unofficial agenda of the Commons justice committee as it was reconstituted Thursday.

Chairman Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville), who led the subcommittee that produced the report after an eye-opening tour of federal prisons, said members likely will demand a progress report from Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais and Corrections Commissioner Donald Yeomans later this month.

"I'm very worried about the penitentiary situation," MacGuigan told a reporter after the justice committee's organizational meeting.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminister), also a member of the 1976 subcommittee, was more blunt.

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board president Robert Andras told senators Tuesday he is deeply worried the federal government may be reduced to a cheque-writing agency for other governments and individuals if the provinces refuse to bear some of the burden of spending restraint.

"I'm not trying to be vindictive or critical of the provinces, I'm just saying this is a real economic problem we face," Andras told the Senate finance committee.

The government's spending restraint program had initially been a beneficial exercise, showing federal officials how much fat and waste could be eliminated.

Recently, however, Andras said he has become increasingly concerned the federal government will have to bear the entire burden of cutting expenditures itself.

"This has serious implications for the viability of our federal government."

Andras said the provincial finance ministers showed a lack of willingness to co-operate with the federal government in controlling their spending appetites at a meeting with Chretien earlier this month.

MUNRO TAKES LAW FIRM POST

HAMILTON (CP) — John Munro, former federal labor minister, said Tuesday he has joined a Hamilton law firm but will continue as MP for Hamilton East while practising law.

"I will do everything required of me and some additional work to represent the riding," Munro said. "It is pretty essential to me to carry on as best I can.

"I don't intend to jeopardize my duties as an MP," he said.

Munro resigned his cabinet post in September after it was revealed he telephoned a provincial court judge on behalf of a Hamilton developer facing sentence on an assault charge.

Munro said he has asked the riding assocation to give him until the end of this year to decide whether he will seek re-election. Munro said he has not reached a final decision on his future in politics.

For three years before his election in 1962, Munro practised law, dealing mainly with cases in the labor field.

Geneticist Shuns Glory

TORONTO (CP) — "I'm not interested in glory," geneticist Louis Siminovitch says. "I'm more interested in curing diseases."

While millions are tuned in to developments in genetics that led to the first test-tube babies and the prospect of clones, geneticists like Dr. Siminovitch quietly forge ahead in less sensational but equally important branches of the science.

His specialty is replacing defective genes with healthy ones, and the scientific awards he has won tell of his contributions to human engineering.

He is a professor and chairman of the department of medical genetics at the University of Toronto and geneticist-in-chief at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children. Dr. Ernest McCulloch, director of the university's medical research institute, calls him one of the most original thinkers in his field.

Dr. Siminovitch says other branches of genetics are more workable and worthwhile than the much-heralded cloning—selectively using genes to reproduce or combine organisms—which he feels won't be done in his lifetime.

More important, he says, is research such as the study of cancer from a genetic perspective. He directs one of the world's first laboratories to examine the disease in this way.

Not since the advent of the atomic age has a field of science attracted attention so widely as genetics. Dr. Siminovitch feels it is important for scientists to involve the public in discussion of the ethical implications.

Dr. Siminovitch, who grew up in Montreal and received a PhD in chemistry from McGill University in 1944, also aims his efforts at the federal government, which he has helped to set ethical and safety standards for genetic research.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Biblical Bodies Studied

CAIRO (UPI) — Egyptian experts have begun investigating the reported discovery of the remains of St. John the Baptist and the prophet Elisha, but they say it's too early to offer any conclusions.

One scientist, Abdel Rahman Abdel Tawab, examined one of the coffins in a cave below an ancient monastery 60 miles northwest of Cairo where Coptic monks say they have discovered the bodies of the two religious figures.

Tawab, one of the scholars appointed by Patriarch Shenudah III of the Coptic Orthodox Church to investigate the discovery, said Tuesday one unopened coffin in the cave appears to be only about 500 years old, making it unlikely it was the original coffin of John.

"But this in itself proves nothing, because the body could have been taken from one coffin and placed into another," Tawab said.

Another Egyptologist, Hishmet Messiheh, said it would be premature to pass judgment now "before we make a thorough scientific examination."

There are at least two coffins in the cave but the monks have only opened one so far, which apparently did not contain John's body.

Trees a Hazard

Home owners with large trees on their property have a responsibility to the community to check the trees early each fall. Growth which has increased during the season may be in a position to cause a hazard either to service wires or by falling on roads, walks or roofs.

The strong winds last week left damaged plants in gardens as well as causing power outages and temporary roadblocks from broken tree branches. Although winds were not so severe in all Victoria areas, the warnings should be heeded. Seldom does the damage remain localized. It frequently extends into affecting service to neighbors or to a larger area, or even causing a fire in some instances with friction.

Young trees with vigorous growth can be pruned to control direction of growth. But it is the treasured older trees that need even more careful examination for safety.

If you have doubts as to your own ability to assess trees on your property for safety this winter, why not call a tree specialist to put your mind at ease? If this is to be a winter of snow, ice and wind, the money will be well spent in having dangerous tree branches removed. This is the feeling of an old friend of ours who had trees close to his home removed just a couple of weeks ago after a branch fell close to the wall last winter.

Smaller trees and shrubs may need attention which you can probably provide. Remove small branches showing signs of interfering with overhead wires. Constant friction in wind is a definite hazard.

Climbing roses may have come loose from supports. They don't climb in the same sense as clematis or honeysuckle climbs. Rose canes need to be tied securely to their support. Tall growing hybrid tea roses may now be shortened to around 30 inches if the plants are exposed to strong winds, but this is not their final annual pruning. That will follow in either late March or early April, according to the weather and location of the garden.

This year's new growth on raspberry canes may have reached to six feet or so in moist, sunny conditions. The shallow rooting habit of raspberries makes them vulnerable to rocking in the wind, thus loosening the roots from the soil. In late spring they are found to be dried and browned.

Shorten these new canes now to about five feet. With the wire supports provided for ease of complete picking of the crop, this height will be found safe for winter. They will also tend to make short side-growths in spring and so will bear more fruit.

Home gardeners do well to check their plants daily throughout winter, especially in particularly bad weather. If we want to enjoy the results of our effort in planting and caring for our treasures during good weather, we must be prepared to check their needs on less favorable days.

Preventing property and personal damage is easier and more desirable than trying to deal with it after the accident happens.

Firing Order

SAN JOSE (Reuter) — Costa Rica said Tuesday it has ordered its civilian guard to open fire on any Nicaraguan troops who cross its border.

New Policy for Handicapped

Four provincial ministries will co-operate more closely to ensure handicapped students get the full benefit of educational programs.

The new policy to more clearly outline procedures for handicapped education involves the ministries of education, health, human resources and the attorney-general, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday.

Under the new system, handicapped children will undergo analysis to ensure they can benefit from the regular school system before being accepted.

If they require additional services, school, health and human resources officials will co-operate in developing a program specially designed for them.

In cases where it is determined needs cannot be met with existing resources, they will be referred to one of 13 regional children's committees.

Mystery Surrounds Murdered Mom

EDMONTON (CP) — "Please bring back my mommy," the three-year-old girl whispered to homicide detective John MacLeod as she clung to his trousers.

He can't. Krista's mother, Gwen Telford, was found murdered, tangled among hotel-room bedsheets 10 days ago.

The woman, said by a friend to love dancing, was dead at 21.

So far, police have no suspects.

Mrs. Telford was last seen about 4 a.m. Nov. 3, when she was dropped off at the west-end hotel by friends.

At 10 a.m. a maid looked into the room and assumed the woman was sleeping. At 3:30 p.m. when it was time to clean the room, another maid found the body in bed, covered with a sheet.

There were no bruises and no signs of a struggle. An autopsy later showed Mrs. Telford died of asphyxiation, possibly by strangulation.

Four days later, the woman's 1962 Oldsmobile was found locked and abandoned in a parking lot in the northeast end of the city, miles from the hotel.

Detective MacLeod said it is not clear just where the car and its location fit into the picture. "It hasn't made any sense yet."

Krista, who will be four on Valentine's Day, is staying with her grandparents. She still misses her mother.

A former boy friend of Mrs. Telford's, who asked not to be identified, said: "I can't think of a single person who would want to murder her. If I could get my hand on him . . . what can I say?"

The Edmonton man said Mrs. Telford, who separated from her husband about three years ago, had worked at two city hotels as a cocktail waitress.

But "she wasn't career-minded. She wanted to settle down and raise a family. She would have made somebody a good wife."

The man said he met Mrs. Telford through a mutual friend at the Kingsway Cabaret and they later danced together.

"She loved to dance. She liked to enjoy herself, go out.

"She was fantastic. She was bubbly. She was a sensitive and very kind girl. She seldom spoke badly of anyone."

Mrs. Telford had been staying at the hotel in which she died while looking for another place to live. She had moved out of her last home in October.

"She'd been through a lot," the one-time boy friend said. "She fell in with a bad lot. She had a habit of trusting the wrong people."

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS

4. SCORE not scare. "Worrying" suggests something less abruptly alarming than a bad scare. Also, an actual scare has its effect without regard to what particular "individuals" might be involved.
7. LIGHTER not tighter. "Almost imperceptibly" refers to that which is barely visible or discernible, such as a dress being LIGHTER in shade or color. Its being tighter is a matter of how it feels.
9. TALKING not tacking. The clue implies that one might have gone straight ahead as a feasible and less time-consuming alternative (e.g., to TALKING instead of going straight ahead with the job). In sailing, when tacking is resorted to, it is presumably the most practical recourse anyway.
16. CUR not car. Since a car is not, in itself, "capable" of any positive act, CUR is the more justifiable answer.
17. BIT not hit. A boy might hit another accidentally (with apology), or in playful sparring, etc., where there is little real question of "retaliation." Evasions of this kind hardly apply in the case of BIT.
18. MEAT not neat. The clue is phrased better for MEAT. it would be a neat pile of sandwiches, rather than "a pile of neat sandwiches" as such.
20. FAKE not face. The idea of critical examination links up better with a FAKE. A truly beautiful face is simply appreciated for what it is.
24. VILLA not viola. As a residence, one aptly associates a VILLA with a family, or "the" family in question. A viola is a person's possession; why whould there be any question of "the family?"

CLUED DOWN

1. MITIGATION not litigation. Specifically, litigation is legal action. The clue favors MITIGATION (soften or diminish) because it is frequently "connected with" trials.
2. CHANCES not changes. The clue tends to view "these" as the sort of things that "crop up" more or less adventitiously; from this aspect, "CHANCES" is the more apt answer.
3. NET not set. A tennis court requires a NET while a set is necessary only if a game is in progress.
8. RAY not rat. A giant rat would presumably be an invention intended to excite alarm. A giant RAY (e.g., manta) might be duly intriguing.
11. LOSE not love. The clue's regretful note suits LOSE better.
12. LIST not lift. The protracted job of having to LIST a lot of things could be "tiring" for an "aging" storekeeper. Having to lift a great deal could well be too much for him altogether.
14. PROJECT not protect. The clue is more practically suited to what one is entitled to "expect" as a listener (PROJECT), rather than what the singer can cimply be presumed to do (protect).
19. FULL not dull. The proviso: "if you have no appetite" favors FULL, since a dull meal is uninteresting anyway.

Treasure Bid Rejected

ZURICH, Switzerland (Reuter) — Two Swedish marine biologists who found treasure in a sunken galleon off Norway turned down a bid of $630,000 Monday for some of the rare coins.

Stefan Persson and Bengt Olav Gustavsson found the treasure six years ago aboard the 280-ton Akerendan of the Dutch East Indies Company, which sank in a storm in 1725.

They estimate the value of their share of the treasure—35,529 coins—at $800,000.

The Big Cat Is Vanishing

HARBIN, Manchuria (AP) — This city is the Chicago of northeastern China. It is also the home of the Manchurian tiger.

It is one of the environmental ironies that this largest of all tigers is an endangered species, protected by the Chinese government, and difficult to breed.

Chang Hsueh-chen, director of the Harbin Zoo, estimates there may be only 100 Manchurian tigers left in the wild wooded river banks of Manchuria, and an unknown number in neighboring Russia and North Korea.

Which is why the work of Mrs. Chao Kuei-lau is so important. She has raised 65 of the rare tiger cubs over the last 20 years and reports an 85 per cent survival rate for all cubs born in the Harbin Zoo.

Manchurian tiger cubs, like babies everywhere, need lots of nourishment and tender loving care, Mrs. Chao says.

Before 1959, zoo director Chang says, China used to export the big beasts to foreign zoos in exchange for other animals, but the export was stopped when Chinese zoos asked for more tigers than were available.

Chang says all the tigers in Chinese zoos initially came from Harbin.

There are no poachers, he says, adding that the wild tigers, one of two species found in China (the others are smaller and not Manchurian) are given the same high government protection afforded China's rare pandas.

Mrs. Chao, a quiet, gentle woman, had never seen a tiger cub until the first two were born here of a wild tigress in 1959, the last year zoos were permitted to capture them.

She recalls that the mother had no milk for her cubs, so Mrs. Chao moved in with the cubs for four months, bottle feeding them.

She smiles as she remembers how the cubs loved to snuggle in her arms. After they grew up they joined a Chinese acrobatic circus for four years and then returned to the zoo.

Unlike pandas, Manchurian tigers are enthusiastic breeders. The female comes into heat several times each year, between January and April.

HERBS FOR THE HEART?

VIENNA (Reuter) — Austrian doctors are taking a leaf out of grandmother's book and turning to herbs in the search for ways of treating heart trouble in the aged.

The medical journal Diet-Reform reports that a favorite medicine is the white hawthorn, which has been found to strengthen heart muscles and regulate their action, reducing strain on that organ.

Doctors emphasize that patients may have to take herbs for long periods for them to have any effect and confess they are not sure just how the hawthorn's properties work.

The magazine carried tips on how to prepare the hawthorn, which grows wild all over Austria, recommending a tea made from the leaves and blossoms mixed with honey as the most tasty method.

Flu Shots Claims Top $2.5B

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Damage claims totalling more than $2.64 billion have been filed against the federal government and more are expected as the deadline nears for claims stemming from the 1976 swine flu immunization program.

The claims are more than 18 tjmes the program's original cost of $135 million, said the Swine Flu Claim and Litigation Reporter, published by Andrews Publications, Inc.

The report said 2,775 claims have been filed, and that $1.4 billion of the current total was filed last month. The deadline on the two-year limit for filing such actions is Dec. 16.

The report said 223 death claims average $1,168,140; personal injury claims average $1,022,445; and those cases involving contraction of Guillain-Barre syndrome average $937,203.

Jeffrey Axelrad, a justice department lawyer leading the government's defence in Washington, confirmed the figures.

Incidents include heart attacks, falls during fainting spells after receiving shots, work days lost, and some paralysis that has not been identified as Guillain-Barre, Leonard Andrews, publisher of the Pennsylvania report, said.

Tanzanians Pursue Ugandans

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Several hundred Tanzanian troops have crossed the Kagera River into the area of northwest Tanzania occupied by the Ugandan army for the last two weeks, Western diplomatic sources said today.

But there was no independent confirmation that the Ugandans have followed Ugandan President Idi Amin's published order Tuesday to withdraw to what he described as Uganda's recognized border.

The diplomatic sources said a battalion-size Tanzanian force, moving in small groups and crossing at several points, has reached the northern bank of the Kagera River.

The Tanzanians, with no artillery or tank support, were sent to harass any Ugandan units still on Tanzanian soil. Their supply lines were nearly non-existent, the sources said.

Since the Ugandans blew up the only bridge over the river the Tanzanians have been left with no possibility of crossing the flood-swollen 50-metre-wide river in force, they said.

In a message broadcast by Uganda Radio Tuesday, Amin announced he has ordered an unconditional withdrawal of the Ugandan forces which occupied the 1,850 square kilometres of territory between the Kagera and the Ugandan border two weeks ago.

The Tanzanian government quickly denounced this as a "complete lie" and said: "The struggle continues."

The diplomatic sources here said so far there was no reliable information from the remote area on the western shore of Lake Victoria on whether the Ugandans have pulled back to their own border.

They said an intense debate appeared to be going on among Tanzanian political and military leaders about whether Tanzania should attempt to punish Uganda for its incursion even if the troops in the Kagera salient were withdrawn.

In Dar es Salaam, the capital of Tanzania, the government-owned Daily News hinted that Tanzania plans more than a peaceful return to its border if the Ugandan troops are pulled out.

"But were Amin to be truthful for once and pull out his troops from the Kagera River to what he calls Uganda's recognized border, what does the world expect us to do? Be thankful?"

Worms For Burgers Rumor Hurts

ATLANTA (AP) — A rumor that the McDonald's fast food chain uses worms in its hamburger meat has damaged sales at a number of restaurants, corporation officials said Tuesday.

Doug Timberlake, corporate communications manager for McDonald's, told a news conference: "It is taking the traditional course of a rumor and it's moving."

He said company officials believe the rumor began in Chattanooga, Tenn., in August. "The basic rumor is so ludicrous that (at first) we didn't pay much attention to it," he said.

But now, it has spread to other states and has caused "some financial damage . . . in individual stores," Timberlake said. He did not estimate how much the firm has lost because of the rumor.

Frozen Transplant Organs Near

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — Scientists may be near a medical breakthrough that would allow human organs to be frozen and saved for later transplants, a leading biologist says.

Such a step would mean hospital patients needing transplants could obtain genetically compatible organs with little or no delay, Dr. Peter Mazur told a meeting of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing here Tuesday.

Organs removed from a dead person normally must be transplanted within a matter of hours or they become useless, said Mazur, a biologist with the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

But Mazur said work performed by him and Dr. Stanley Leibo, also of Oak Ridge, in the field of cryobiology — the study of how subzero temperatures affect living systems — means mankind one day may be able to control time, rather than the reverse.

He said six years ago he and Leibo and a British researcher successfully froze mouse embryos, then thawed them and implanted the eggs in foster mothers which gave birth to healthy mice.

That accomplishment, along with dramatic results in sperm preservation, moved the scientists to press harder in their efforts to freeze human organs and store them indefinitely, Mazur said.

Cryobiologic advances with mammalian embryos and fetal organs have made it likely that a human kidney, composed of a wide variety of cells, will be successfully preserved in the near future, he said.

But a major obstacle has to do with finding the right cooling and thawing range because different cells have different limitations. Mazur said another problem is that additives used in the freezing process, such as glycerol, can be toxic to certain cells.

Bodily rejection of transplanted organs, the most common problem in such operations, could be greatly reduced or possibly even eliminated through freezing, Mazur said.

25 Army Drug Deaths

Rex Gribble, a press spokesman for the U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg, said 25 of the 185,000 U.S. soldiers stationed in West Germany and one dependent had died from drugs by the middle of the year, compared with 26 soldiers and five dependents and civilian employees for all of 1977.

"There's no doubt that there will be an increase," Gribble said. "I don't know how significant, but there's bound to be an increase."

U.S. investigators say there has been an increase in hard-drug traffic across the continent. One investigator said 265 pounds of heroin have been seized in Western Europe this year.

Gribble said drug use among U.S. troops in West Germany declined in 1975 and 1976. Some sources speculated that the Communist takeover in Southeast Asia reduced supplies of Laotian opium from which heroin was extracted.

The increase in the drug supply indicates that dealers have developed new sources of supply.

CRAPPER MEMORIAL

LONDON (AP) — A member of the Greater London Council says he feels Thomas Crapper, who invented the flush toilet more than 100 years ago, deserves to be honored for his service to humanity.

"Mr. Crapper deserves a memorial," insists Councilman Illtyd Harrington. "I will do my best to see that we get him one." The matter arose in the council's historic buildings committee two weeks ago and was on the Tuesday agenda of the full council for further consideration.

Harrington said this rates one of the blue plaques scattered around London on buildings that have historical significance but no-one has located the building where Crapper built and sold his invention.

Boumedienne Still Ill

ALGIERS (CP) — Algerian President Houari Boumedienne, slumped in an armchair with his face appeared to be swollen, was shown briefly on television Tuesday night at his first working session with government leaders in more than seven weeks.

Boumedienne, 51, returned earlier in the day from Moscow, where he had flown unexpectedly in mid-October and had talks with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

The television film provided only a short glimpse of Boumedienne and seemed unlikely to quell speculation about his health. Pictures of him returning to Algiers were not shown.

The few official reports during his absence said only that he was tired and was resting in the Soviet Union.

When the camera focused on him Tuesdxay night, Boumedienne appeared to be gesturing with both hands as if in an effort to shield his eyes from bright television lights.

The government news agency Algerie Presse Service (APS) said Boumedienne presided over a meeting with members of his Council of the Revolution, the president of the National Assembly and members of the government.

Boumedinne was in the Soviet Union for one month ostensibly for medical treatment.

The APS, reported his return in a brief dispatch which said only that he was accompanied by Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika.

Boumedienne, 53, had last been seen in public in Algeria in late September. Diplomatic sources in Paris have given credence to reports that he was suffering from a serious facial problem, of unknown nature, which had caused temporary paralysis of one side of his face, and possibly of an arm.

Explain Stall, Smith Demands

SALISBURY (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith has asked the United States and Britain to explain why they are delaying arranging negotiations between his government and the Patriotic Front guerrillas.

In a lengthy statement Tuesday night, Smith noted that a month had passed since he and his three black colleagues agreed in Washington to attend a conference with the Front.

Smith complained of "the very serious lack of followup by either the British or United States administration and their apparent disregard of repeated warnings from myself not to drag their heels."

His statement came hours after the executive council failed to break the deadlock on whether to postpone elections next month and a full switch to black rule Dec. 31 — the date stipulated in the "internal" majority rule agreement signed by Smith and three local black leaders in March. That agreement has been rejected by both the West and the guerrillas.

Appearing to be calling on Washington and London to provide him with ammunition to sway Thursday's meeting in favor of putting off the Dec. 31 deadline, Smith said in his statement:

"I am obliged ... in the interest of the Rhodesian people to now call upon the British and United States governments for some explanation and clarification for the delay" in organizing negotiations with the Patriotic Front.

"I hope the United States and British administrations will give us a straightforward and honest reply."

The Patriotic Front has threatened to attack polling stations if the elections are held.

Smith and black leader Jeremiah Chirau openly favor postponement while the other two black executive council members, Abel Muzorewa and Ndabaningi Sithole favor proceeding in accordance with the agreement. Sithole, however, declined to rule out the prospect of a delay.

Sandinistas Bare Sabres

Washington Post

SAN JOSE — Nicaragua's Sandinista National Liberation Front guerrillas Tuesday issued a communique proclaiming that the "hour of the decisive battle" against the government of Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza "has arrived."

The communique, which was signed by guerrilla military chief Eden Pastora, head of the "Sandinista National Liberation Army," said that the "Somoza dictatorship" had left war as the only alternative to the Nicaraguan crisis.

While the clandestinely distributed document did not give a specific date for renewed attack on Nicaragua by the guerrillas, who led a September civil war aginst the Nicaraguan National Guard, Pastora said in an interview earlier this week at a guerrilla training camp that its purpose is to "tell the people of Nicaragua to prepare themsleves and expect war."

"It would be to our advantage if we had two or three more months," Pastora said. "From a military point of view the offensive may be premature. But the situation in Nicaragua is such that we feel compelled to take action."

Pastora said that a U.S.-sponsored mediation effort to resolve peacefully the conflict between Somoza and a business and political coalition that has demanded his resignation "no longer has a chance."

The six-week old mediation, conducted by a three-nation team including the United States, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic, reached a stalemate last week when Somoza rejected an opposition proposal calling for his resignation and the formation of a provisional government, and the opposition then turned down Somoza's counterproposal of a national plebiscite and a reorganization of the government under his continuing presidency.

The negotiators returned to their home countries for consultation over the weekend, and are expected back in Managua today for further talks.

EXPORTS BOOMING

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain announced Tuesday its best trade figures since April, with exports at a record level. The government's figures for October showed a balance of payments surplus of $412 million compared with a September deficit of $276 million. There was a visible trade surplus, the difference between exports and imports, of $234 million. The estimated surplus on invisible earnings from such things as tourism, shipping and insurance was $177 million. Exports in October were a record at $6.15 billion and imports were $5.91 billion. This compares with September's figures of $6.02 billion in exports and $6.45 billion in imports.

Callaghan's Clamp Rejected by TUC

LONDON (AP) — An agreement between Britain's powerful Trades Union Congress and Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government to hold down pay increases to trim inflation was rejected by the TUC's governing council Tuesday.

A document which tried to paper over the breach between the government and the TUC on national pay and economic policies was rejected on a 14-14 tie vote by the TUC's general council. There were two abstentions and General Secretary Len Murray had no voting power to break the deadlock.

The TUC represents 12 million workers, more than half the country's 22 million work force.

The agreement was drawn up by Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey and six TUC representatives during the past month. It was a watered-down version of the initial document sought by the government, which is pressing for a five-per-cent ceiling on wage increases in order keep inflation down.

Inflation is running at about 7.8 per cent. This time last year it hovered around 16 per cent.

Following the vote, Murray said the TUC general council has no plans to reopen talks with the government.

Ken Thomas, general secretary of the Civil and Public Services Association, blamed "arrogant statements and threats" by Healey in a weekend radio broadcast as a factor in the rejection vote.

"You don't win an argument by battering your opponents to death," said Thomas.

Healey said the goverment will stick to its pay policy and if necessary, will use sanctions against pay-code breakers.

Icy Welcome For Nixon

LONDON (AP) — Although unenthusiastic, Britain's Labor government is reported ready to extend the "normal courtesy" to a former head of state when disgraced former president Richard Nixon visits Britain later this month.

Nixon is to address the Oxford Union, Oxford University's debating society, Nov. 30 after a four-day stay in Paris where he will appear on the state-run television network.

Oxford Union invited Nixon, but university sources say there were feelers from Nixon first.

Official sources, who ask not to be identified, indicated that neither Prime Minister James Callaghan nor his senior cabinet colleagues are enthusiastic at the prospect of receiving Nixon.

"The prime minister will, of course, have the former president around for a chat if Mr. Nixon requests a meeting," one source said.

"That would be a normal courtesy, especially as the two men knew each other when Mr. Callaghan was foreign secretary and Mr. Nixon was in the White House."

Callaghan and some of his ministers now are being courteous to another controversial figure. Indira Gandhi, former Indian prime minister, is in Britain on an eight-day private visit. Tuesday she had tea separately with Callaghan and Margaret Thatcher, leader of the opposition Conservative party.

During her 1975-1977 emergency rule, Mrs. Gandhi jailed thousands of political opponents and suspended many democratic processes. She was defeated in a March, 1977, election and now faces charges resulting from her suspension of civil liberties.

Aside from the trip to France and Britain, Nixon says he plans no major foreign travel until he finishes his next book, probably next spring.

China Frees Tibet Spies

PEKING (Reuter) — China has freed from prison 24 former leading officials in Tibet as well as 10 "secret agents who had sneaked into Tibet."

The Hsinhua news agency said today in a report from Lhasa that the prisoners were freed on Nov. 4 "as an expression of leniency."

The agency said the 24 included officials of the former Tibetan government, Buddhas and former commanders of rebel forces.

The 10 secret agents freed "had sneaked into Tibet at the orders of foreign reactionaries and the secret services of the rebels now in exile abroad."

The 10 were not named and no other details of their activities were given.

In another report from Lhasa today, the news agency said all Tibetans living in exile abroad "including those of the upper strata who fled the country" are welcome to return to China.

It quoted Tien Pao, vice-chairman of the Tibet autonomous region's revoluiontary committee, as saying on Nov. 4 that these "should extricate themselves from their predicament of living on alms and suffering discrimination, and return home to participate in the country's socialist construction."

Tibet—sometimes called the Rooftop of the World because of its average altitude of 5,000 metres—became independent of China in 1911 but Peking reasserted control in 1951 and a Communist government was installed two years later. A rebellion in 1959 was crushed by Chinese troops and the region's leader, the Dalai Lama, fled to India with thousands of his followers.

Refugee Ship Given Water

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuter) — Water and medical supplies have been transported to the small freighter Hai Hong, anchored off the west Malaysian coast with 2,500 Vietnamese on board for the last week.

The Malaysian government has also offered to help repair the engine of the ship, lying in Malaysian waters off Port Klang 32 kilometres west of Kuala Lumpur, but has refused to allow anyone ashore.

Malaysia is under international pressure to permit the Vietnamese to land but the government says it believes they are not genuine refugees but fee-paying emigrants whose passage was organized by an international syndicate.

The United Nations High Commission for Refugees has appealed to the Malaysian government to allow them ashore and the United States, the main resettlement country for Indochina refugees, has supported the UNHCR position.

An estimated 9,000 Vietnamese "boat people" reached Malaysia in the first two weeks of this month, setting a record, and increasing the government's concern over the problem.

An informed Western diplomatic source said today that Vietnamese refugees now are arriving by boat from their Communist homeland at the rate of between 300 and 500 a day.

Malaysia has made it clear it feels it is bearing an unfair share of the refugee burden. More than 50,000 refugees have arrived in Malaysia this year, and 30,000 are still in camps awaiting resettlement.

CTC Vows Fast Answer on E&N

The Canadian Transport Commission was bombarded with briefs today as it opened hearings into the future of the the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway's Victoria-Courtenay passenger service.

A spokesman for the commission said members may make and announce their decision before returning to Ottawa.

More than 100 people were present when the three-member CTC review commission opened proceedings in the Red Lion Inn.

There were no less than 24 briefs on hand when the inquiry opened and organizers say they expect more.

Chairman of the committee is E.J. Benson and commissioners are Jim McDonough and Anne Carver.

The city of Victoria's submission scoffed at CP Rail's claim the passenger line will never be profitable and chided the CTC for unilaterally accepting two-year-old data from the company.

About a year ago the CTC granted a CP Rail request to end passenger service on the line by July but provincial government intervention led to a postponement of the closure until Dec. 13.

The review committee of the CTC holding the public inquiry has the power to overrule the original CTC decision.

The hearing was called because of new information that has come to light since the original decision.

The city brief argues the facts put to the original hearing were insufficient for the committee to make the decision it did in December, 1977.

Based on information provided by CP Rail, the committee concluded the passenger service is uneconomic and likely to remain uneconomic.

"The actual losses incurred by this passenger train service are substantial considering the small number of passengers for whose convenience it currently exists."

But numerous groups pointed to a significant resurgence — 800 per cent according to the Save the E and N steering committee — in passenger traffic on the line with a little bit of local initiative and publicity.

The city brief, along with others from the Capital Regional District, NDP MP Tommy Douglas and letters from Liberal MP Hugh Anderson, points out the failure of CP Rail — parent company of the E and N — to live up to its obligation to try and better the profitability of the

137 Carats And $12M

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The world's finest and — at $12 million — most expensive diamond, the 137.02-carat Premier Rose, was displayed here Tuesday.

The Mouw Diamond Cutting Works, in partnership with a U.S. diamond firm, paid a record $5.17 million last May for the stone in the rough.

There are several potential buyers, said Sylvain Mouw in an interview at his family's tightly-guarded offices in the diamond district of Johannesburg. For security reasons, he wouldn't say who was bidding.

"We have been in touch with interested parties in America, the Far East and the Middle East," he said. "This is a stone worthy of royalty and this is not an empty statement."

The diamond was found at the Premier mine near Pretoria last April and the Mouw family, in partnership with William Goldberg of Goldberg-Weiss of New York City, made the winning bid when De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd. put the stone up for sale in May.

Sylvain's father, Joe, showed off the diamond in its protective, spotlighted case in which it slowly revolved, blazing light from its 189 facets. Everybody was smiling except the man in plain clothes with a pistol in his belt.

The stone will go to New York for examination by the Gemological Institute of America where Mouw predicted it will get the highest rating, D-Flawless, meaning it is a pure white diamond.

The world's largest diamond, the Cullinan Diamond — 3,106 carats — was found in 1905, also at the Premier mine. The Star of Africa No. 1, which is in the British Royal Sceptre, was cut from it.

Sylvain said the Premier Rose is much finer than the Cullinan due to techniques unavailable when the Cullinan was cut in 1908.

The planning, cutting, faceting and polishing of the Premier Rose took six months. The Mouws made more than 60 plastic replicas of the rough stone, cutting them in practice runs.

It's a Crisis, Says Sadat

CAIRO (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said today the peace talks between Egypt and Israel are in a state of crisis and raised the possibility of a suspension to allow the two countries time to ponder their positions.

At the same time, informed Egyptian sources said their government has new proposals designed to avoid a total deadlock while still holding to Egypt's key demands.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli cabinet broke off a review of the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations in Washington to await clarification of the proposals expected from Egypt.

"According to the latest reports received, Egypt is about to submit new proposals and demands related to the negotiations between the two countries. These reports are not yet official and complete.

"In view of this fact, the cabinet decided to hold the political debate after it has received all the necessary clarifications concerning the additional positions of Egypt."

Egyptian sources said the proposals will be explained to U.S. President Carter by Egyptian Vice-President Hosni Mubarak, who is on his way to Washington.

The sources said they seek to deal with the Gaza Strip after a peace treaty with Israel is signed, leaving the problem of the West Bank to a subsequent stage.

The sticking point at the Washington talks has been Sadat's demand that the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty be linked with progress on solving the West Bank and Gaza Strip questions.

INDUSTRIAL PARK ISSUE

Judge Decision Friday?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hearing into dishonorable personal conduct charges against a provincial court judge adjourned Tuesday as the British Columbia Judicial Council began deliberating whether Judge Erik Bendrodt should be allowed to remain on the bench.

During the hearing, Bendrodt, 44, admitted that he had picked up a 19-year-old prostitute outside a downtown hotel for the purpose of having sex. His lawyer also admitted that Bendrodt is an alcoholic but said the problem has not hampered the judge's performance.

Council chairman Judge Lawrence Goulet of the B.C. provincial court adjourned the hearing until Friday at which time the council's recommendations to Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving could be announced.

IRA Heating Up Terror Campaign

Times News Services

BELFAST — Irish Republican Army guerrillas hit Northern Ireland today in their heaviest bombing campaign of the past year causing millions of pounds worth of damage and warning there will be no Christmas ceasefire.

The attacks, in which 37 people were wounded, were a reminder of the worst days of the Northern Ireland troubles and a bitter blow to the security forces and government, which had been promoting the view that life in Ulster gradually was returning to normal.

The bombings were viewed as an attempt by the IRA to sabotage a recent relaxation of security measures and a current visit by Northern Ireland Secretary Roy Mason to the United States.

Mason is trying to encourage more investment and business to Northern Ireland to ease unemployment.

British army experts defused a number of bombs and men of the Royal Ulster Constabulary discovered nine bombs in a van heading toward Belfast.

In the village of Castlederg, 104 kilometres west of Belfast, four bomb blasts caused more destruction similar to that suffered Tuesday in Londonderry, Omagh, Dungannon, Enniskillen and Cookstown.

Newry, which suffered widespread destruction in bomb blasts Tuesday, was sealed off today as two bombs continued to threaten the heart of the market town 72 kilometres south of Belfast.

A car bomb on a bridge across the River Mourne in the border town of Strabane still posed a threat despite two controlled explosions by the army.

Among the worst-hit areas Tuesday was the small border town of Castlederg, where witnesses said four bombs blasted the town centre and shattered shops and burned vehicles.

Police there received warnings and evacuate shoppers from busy streets shortly after dusk, minutes before the first bomb exploded. Firemen were unable to tackle fires started by the blasts for fear of further explosions.

The bustling market town of Dungannon, west of here, was hit by a big car bomb that wrecked 64 shops and offices. Telephoned warnings there came too late and most of those injured were shoppers and shop workers hit by flying glass and debris before police could clear the area.

There were similar scenes, but on a smaller scale, in six other towns.

BEER PLOY PROBED

The Liquor Control and Licensing Branch is investigating a report that a Vancouver hotel has attempted to get rid of a surplus amount of U.S. beer by mixing it with Canadian draught beer, a branch spokesman said today.

The spokesman only confirmed that the investigation is under way and gave no further details.

Union spokesman Ron Bonar said in an interview from Vancouver he is aware unofficially of a former bar manager's charge that the hotel had been mixing the beer.

Bonar, business manager for the Hotel, Restaurant, Culinary and Bartenders' Union, Local 40, said the man claims he was forced to quit his job at the hotel because he refused to mix the U.S. canned beer with the Canadian draught.

He declined to name the hotel and stressed the reports he has received have only been unofficial. He said there have not been any other reports.

B.C. hotels were stuck with a surplus of American beer once the three-month brewery strike this summer was settled and B.C. breweries began to produce.

PM Plans Cabinet Shuffle Then Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says he plans to shuffle his cabinet before the Christmas season is over and then lead the Liberals in a federal election when Canadians have more confidence in their future.

He refused to pinpoint a date for the election, saying it will be held in a matter of months, rather than days.

Trudeau's five-year mandate expires next summer and he is expected to hold a federal election, his fourth as leader, in spring.

The prime minister was slightly more precise on the timing of the cabinet shuffle. It would be either before or during the Christmas season. Trudeau aides said the shuffle had been planned for October and then early this month but was postponed.

Some polls show the Liberals could fare better if a new leader was found. Would Trudeau step down to help the party?

"No. When I was leading the party (in public opinion polls), I didn't think of ditching the party. I have no such plans now."

Why was Trudeau so confident he should continue as leader?

"Considering the alternatives, I think I'm the best man," he said with a restrained chuckle.

Budget Keyword: Caution

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said the government will have to exercise caution to avoid overspending when it brings in a new budget Thursday.

But he added it was the rate of growth of deficits and not the size of them alone that was of greater concern to the government.

Trudeau, who ducked several questions on the economy Tuesday at one of his sporadic weekly news conferences, also seemed to suffer a momentary lapse of memory, saying the budget was coming Wednesday.

Trudeau said the federal cash requirements this year will be about $9 billion, about $11 billion next year and "probably a bit higher than the year after."

Chretien has said the cash deficit this year will be a record $11.8 billion, falling to $9.7 billion in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

The prime minister, reply-

Chinese Sock That Sinful Rock

By JOHN FRASER
Special to The Times

PEKING — A new national youth newspaper has published a stinging, sarcastic attack on the sins of Western rock music, indirectly acknowledging that it is catching on with young Chinese couples.

The article, however, was written in such a colorful and suggestive way, it may just encourage more young people to discover what all the fuss is about.

Ostensibly, the reason for the blast is the growing number of rock and roll nightclubs in the "revisionist" Soviet Union, but there is ample evidence the real target is closer to home.

A couple of weeks ago, the government-run International Club revived its weekly Saturday night dance for foreigners and it has provoked intense curiosity among a surprising number of Chinese in the capital. More importantly, dancing at private Chinese parties has been officially, if informally, approved for several months.

Although it is difficult to find out precisely what kind of music the authorities consider appropriate for the Chinese people to dance to, it is now quite clear that Western rock or its Soviet equivalent is not included.

"In a report about the state of rock and roll in various parts of the Soviet Union which was carried in the Communist Youth League newspaper," said the article in Quingnian Bao, the new Chinese equivalent of the same paper, "it is clear how popular this thing (rock and roll) that has prevailed in the West has become among Soviet youth today.

"Today in the U.S.S.R., cafes and nightclubs are glittering and attract all sorts of youths. They are looking for hedonism and stimulation for their organs. Revolutionary idealism, hard work, noble character and living a hard life are all values that have gone out of style and aren't worth a thing."

Mini-World

Major Project Planned at Academy

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Big Ben, the Tower of London, and Buckingham Palace will all be re-created in downtown Victoria if a multi-million dollar tourist attraction — the biggest ever tackled on southern Vancouver Island — gets the green light.

Victoria businessman George Devlin, a partner in the scheme, says negotiations have started with the provincial government for a long-term lease on about five acres of the old St. Ann's Academy property on Humboldt Street where the mini-world attraction would be built.

He said in an interview he's met senior government officials, including Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, several times in recent months and they're enthusiastic.

Devlin, who owns and operates the Royal Albert Miniature World in The Empress, said the attraction would involve London landmarks re-created in the form of one/twenty-fourth scale models.

Using such a scale St. Paul's Cathedral would stand 14 feet high, Big Ben nine feet and Nelson's Monument a little over 11 feet.

The models themselves, exact replicas, would be made by Devlin's partner in the venture, KLF House of Dorset, England, which operates a mini-world complex of its own called Tucktonia at Bournemouth.

Devlin said the Victoria scheme was conceived by KLF House which is also planning to build model villages and displays in Cairo, Bermuda, northern England and Indonesia.

While such attractions have been popular in Europe for several years — Madurodam in Holland, Legoland in Denmark and Mini Dome in Germany are the most notable examples — they are new to North America.

"Even Disneyland doesn't have something like this," Devlin said.

He estimates it will cost $3 million to develop the St. Ann's site. He and KLF House would split the costs.

An early plan shows the London landmark display running the full length of the eastern half of the property with the "Thames River" coursing through the middle.

On the other half the plan shows a replica of the Globe Theatre which would be used for an annual Shakspearean festival. There's also an English hedge maze, an adventure playground for children, a pond where persons can run their own models, and a miniature steam train circling the entire area. Models of Canadian landmarks line the route.

Devlin said the design is only tentative because the government has yet to decide what it wants to do with the property. There is talk of using the building as a centre of fine arts. Devlin feels that would be compatible with his mini-world scheme.

He said negotiations have been going on for several months with the government. He is hoping to get a minimum 50-year lease. If the lease arrangements can be completed by the end of the year, the attraction could be open for business within 18 months, or by May, 1980, he said.

The scheme would create about 30 permanent jobs, and double that during the summer.

"Economically, culturally and esthetically speaking I think the idea represents the best use for the land," Devlin said. "The Academy would be converted to what it was originally, a school, and we'd have an attraction that would hold the tourists here at least another half day."

Charter Buses To Continue, Seniors Promised

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, responding to a request from more than 15,000 Vancouver Island senior citizens, will make Pacific Coach Line buses available for charter tours.

His pledge came after 19 Vancouver Island senior citizens groups expressed fears the service will be halted when the charter section of Pacific Coach Lines is sold.

First, whoever buys the charter service from the government will have to agree to continue to make buses available to all Vancouver Island groups requesting the service, just as Pacific Coach Lines did in the past.

And secondly, if the private enterprise group does not have enough buses available for charter work, the government will make some of its remaining buses available during peak periods to supplement the supply.

In this way, Curtis said, there will be enough buses to carry on the service.

Mrs. Barker said she is delighted.

She had been concerned that the buses might be sold to some company that might not make them available in the Victoria area.

However, Curtis said he gave assurance that part of the terms of sale of the charter bus division is a commitment that the service would be run by private enterprise in the same way it was run by the government.

Mrs. Barker Tuesday presented a brief to the minister showing that in 1977 the members of the senior citizens groups took 402 charter bus trips with a total of 17,624 passengers.

In 1977, she said, the local Silver Threads group took 128 charter bus trips involving 5,369 people. In the same year, Oak Bay Senior Activity Centre members took 40 trips involving 1,800 passengers and James Bay New Horizons members took eight trips involving 360 passengers.

Earlier, the 120 bus drivers of Pacfic Coach Lines offered to buy the whole service from the government to prevent it from being dismantled. The drivers owned the line for four years from 1970 to 1974, until it was taken over by the government.

Curtis said there is no change in the government's plan to sell off all divisions of the company except regularly scheduled inter-city runs.

On the auction block are Gray Lines (a sightseeing bus company) along with the airport service and American escorted tour services.

Bids closed on Oct. 30 but no sales have been announced.

Q. Can you tell me when and where unemployment insurance first came into existence? R.J.

A. In Great Britain, the Journeymen Steam Engine Makers' Society began paying out-of-work benefits in 1824. But the first compulsory unemployment insurance system was introduced by Britain in 1911. In the United States, the first federal insurance scheme was established in 1935.

Gov't Asks Ideas For Better Road Signs

The provincial department of highways today invited Victoria hotel owners to suggest improved signs for the Blanshard freeway in an effort to resolve a controversy over an alleged broken promise.

"Maybe the sign could be improved," said Ray Baines, senior information officer for the department.

"If the hotel people come to us with a proposal I'm sure we will give it careful consideration."

Jack Hepburn, spokesmen for the Douglas Street hotels and motels, said he is prepared to do just that..

Hepburn has a Xerox of a proposed sign shown him by the department of highways in May. It reads: City Centre, Meals, Accommodation. It was to have been placed behind Town and Country Shopping Centre on Blanshard and an arrow on the sign would have diverted tourist traffic along Saanich Road.

Hotels and motels did not protest the bypass, he said, on the understanding this large sign would be erected.

Instead, the department installed a sign reading simply: Meals, Accommodation with an arrow pointing to Saanich Road.

"The sign we put up is standard all across North America," Baines said. "It seemed suitable for that location but if the hotel people want something more, if something more was promised them, we would be prepared to take a second look at it."

Hotels and motels report business down as much as 40 per cent since the Blanshard extension was completed and the hotel area was bypassed by through traffic.

Hepburn said that, because of changed traffic patterns, a large sign is needed at the Saanich Road turnoff and, in addition, better signs are needed for traffic going north on Douglas so people heading out of town will know there is accommodation further out on Douglas as well as along the Gorge.

Baines said the department of highways would look at the Blanshard sign but is not responsible for signs on Douglas which would be inside the Victoria City limit and a municipal responsibility.

In addition, any signs on Blanshard inside Victoria City boundary are also be a municipal responsibility, although the department will assist in any way it can, Baines said.

Meanwhile, Victoria MLA Charles Barber has urged Highways Minister Alex Fraser to prepare maps, posters, brochures and signs outlining the new routes before the peak tourist season arrives.

Route information should be distributed to tourists aboard B.C. Ferries, Barber said, so they will be prepared to turn right off Blanshard at Saanich Road.

Better signs must also be erected at the Saanich Road turnoff and on the Island Highway directing tourists to hotel and motel accommodation on Douglas, he said.

"The Blanshard Street extension is a good thing," Barber said. "The correct combination of road signs, pamphlets, and posters redirecting tourist-only traffic to routes 1 (Douglas) and 1A (the Gorge) would make it a better thing."

Would the Old Salts Touch the Stuff Now?

The stone cairn overlooking Esquimalt Harbor in View Royal has a touch of irony in the message it carries.

The plaque, erected by the Thermopylae Club, pays tribute to the "gallant sailors" of the past.

Nothing ironic in that.

It is the latter end of the message that appears out of place. It notes that the ancient mariners had used this place to replenish their fresh water supplies.

Here we are on a tour guided by Al Beasley, View Royal director on the Capital Regional District, tracing the escape of raw sewage throughout the area.

Close to the cairn, tumbling like a river in spite of a rainless two weeks, sewage was spilling down the bank and into the quiet harbor.

Regional health officer Dr. Allen Arneil says few, if any, will disagree that there is a health hazard in View Royal.

He says correction of the problem on an individual basis would be costly and, in some cases, impossible.

Arneil says a communal collection system of some kind appears to be the only answer.

On Saturday, for the fourth time, View Royal residents will vote on sewers.

Beasley is convinced he and his neighbors have reached the crossroads.

View Royal residents at a Tuesday night meeting in All Saints Parish hall supported him in his stand that now is the hour.

John White, long-time opponent of sewers and chairman of the Sewage Options Committee, was accused by one resident of stalling sewers for six years.

"We could have had it for one-quarter of what it's going to cost us now," White was told.

Applause greeted a woman's statement that "we never had a better deal to get it done."

White admitted that septic systems like his own, which he proposed as one alternative to View Royal's sewage problem, had been outlawed by health authorities.

A resident of View Royal since 1971 and its volunteer fire chief for 21 years, Beasley knows the area well and says there are at least 100 malfunctioning septic tanks that threaten the quality of life in View Royal.

He voted against the condominium development in which he now lives because of the lack of sewers.

Having fought for sewers for 10 years, Beasley is hoping the financial picture this time will win an affirmative vote.

Figures show that a home with 75-foot frontage will cost about $169.36 a year to be hooked into the sewer system. Over 25 years this amounts to $4,250.

Being able to hook into the trunk sewer planned to serve the new Helmcken Road hospital will reduce over-all costs to View Royal residents substantially. The provincial government will contribute $3,624,000, federal government grants will amount to $214,000 and residents will pay $1,377,000.

"For $4,000 over 25 years we can get sewers. It costs $3,000 for a septic tank and you have no guarantee," Beasley says, adding that rock makes it impossible for some areas to install adequate septic tank systems.

Without sewers, Beasley says, it is impossible to create a workable community plan.
